Top brass probes hospital

OAKLAND — The Navy had been warned before about the "situation" at Naval Regional Medical Center in Oakland where controversial deaths of a Dublin man and two other patients in June are being investigated by top Naval officials, according to Dr. David Crane.

Dr. Crane is the Navy Lieutenant whose written charges about insufficient staffing, supplies and equipment at Naval Regional Medical Center provoked the investigation. He works at the Center. During a press conference at the Center Thursday, Dr. Crane brought up the fact the Navy had prior knowledge about the "situation."

The Dublin man, Joaquin Miner, 78, died June 27 of coronary complications following a gall bladder operation, according to a hospital spokesman. His widow and two sons survive. He was a Navy veteran.

"Even before the three deaths occurred, my original intent of wanting an investigation was because I perceived a lack of staffing, supplies and equipment that had the potential of placing patient's lives in jeopardy," Dr. Crane said.

"But on a day to day basis, the excellent quality of this hospital is unsurpassed," he added.

Rear Admiral Stanley J. Anderson, U.S. Navy, Naval Inspector General, is heading the investigative team which includes top-ranking Naval officials. The investigation began Thursday. Rear Adm. Anderson said he had no idea how long it would take to complete.

Dr. Crane said, "The Inspector General's office is responding adequately to my letter of charges. They are proceeding appropriately."

Dr. Crane would not give any details about the controversial deaths since he said it could undermine the investigation. However, he did admit that resident physicians on the Miner case had been called away from Miner's room to answer an emergency call.

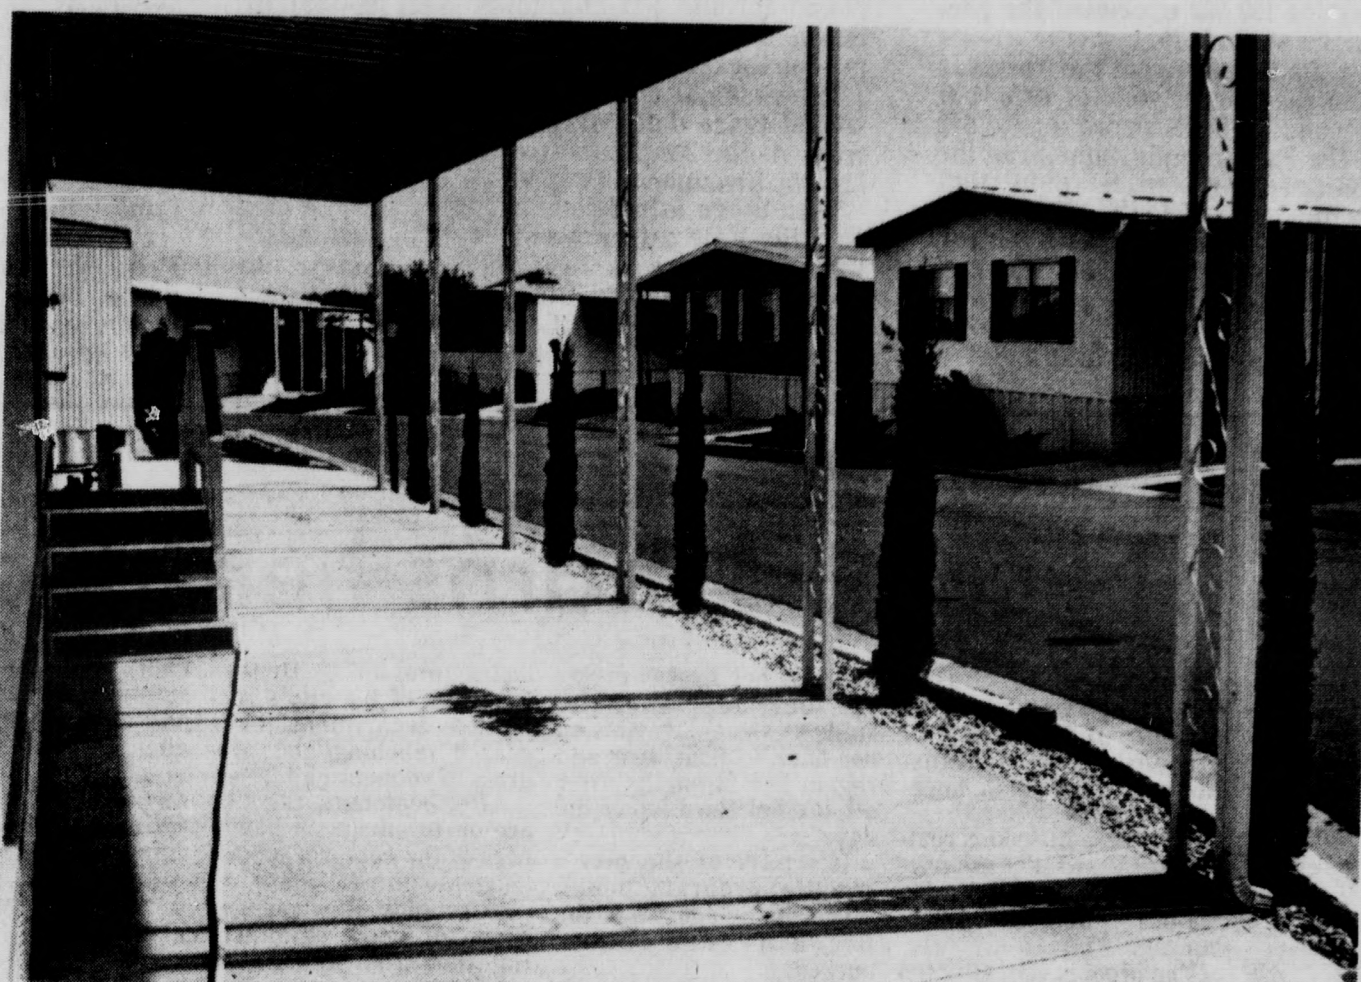

Dr. Crane pointed out that lack of funding to provide adequate supplies and equipment were also part of the problem.

Dr. Crane said he had contacted Michael Rose, Attorney at Law in case the Navy decided to take any stringent disciplinary action against him.

"Rose was chief counsel for the West Point cadets during their recent problem. He also represents physicians nationwide who are having legal problems."

Dr. Crane said so far the Navy had only made the recommendation that he not continue in his third year residency at the present time.

Pleasanton public hearing invites growth plan views

PLEASANTON — The public will get its first shot at the city's "Growth Management Plan" tomorrow night when city planning commissioners open it to citizen scrutiny.

The public hearing starts at 8 p.m. in city council chambers, 30 W. Angela St.

Final approval of the plan, expected sometime in late summer or early fall, will detail development in the city for the next 20 years.

Tomorrow night's meeting is the first of many public hearings to be held as the plan winds its way from planning commission to city council where it faces final approval.

At stake are who builds what, where, when — and how.

As produced by the city's growth management committee, a consortium of planning and park and recreation commissioners, city council members, developers and private citizens, the plan would establish a point system.

A developers' application for building license would be awarded points based on conformance with a set of environmental and economic standards.

The more points, the higher the priority when limited permits are issued.

The plan is to keep the city within the state's "E-0" population growth figures to a maximum 1995 population of 48,600.

The city must meet the criteria to qualify for federal and state funds that are slated to build the controversial $38 million LAVWMA pipeline.

Essentially, the plan lays out "mandatory" requirements for future home development and a set of "incentives" which will earn the points.

City council will allocate a given number of building permits each year. They will go to the developers who meet the mandates and have the most points.

Commercial and industrial development falls outside the scope of the massive, two-inch thick plan.

Incentive points would be awarded for energy and water conservation features built into the housing plans, noise standards, traffic circulation, design, air quality, and other environmental, fiscal and housing factors.

In addition, the growth management committee has recommended city council adopt ordinances covering energy and water conservation and noise abatement.

It calls on the city to "solicit and approve Williamson Act preserve applications" from farmers and ranchers in order to tuck agricultural land under the protective tax umbrella and pull it from the speculative market.

The plan calls for "in-filling" currently underdeveloped areas and maximizing the use of existing utilities.

Pleasanton man donates pool water, concrete too

PLEASANTON — Jim Hobbs may be the first homeowner in America to recycle his swimming pool.

Hobbs let the media know a couple of days ago that the 42,000 gallons of water in his swimming pool had to come out so that a pool company can repair the crack in the pool.

Laura Malich of Danville heard about it and was grateful to be able to get the water free. People in Contra Costa County are on severe water rationing and they have had to pay $100 to $500 to fill their new swimming pools. A Walnut Creek firm donated the transport free in the interests of water conservation.

Hobbs also found a way to recycle some of the remainder of the swimming pool. It seems the concrete deck has to come out, too, so a local cement contractor showed up Friday and hauled away the cement to use in construction of a concrete wall elsewhere in Pleasanton.

Hobbs is grateful to the media for putting people in touch with him. He agrees with the old motto, "Find a need and fill it."

VMH crisis service proves successful

LIVERMORE — Few people would envy Maralyn Beadleson's job as a psychiatric therapist at Valley Memorial Hospital, counseling those despondent over money problems, sickness, or even impending death. But the job must be done.

Beadleson is one of three professional therapists in the Crisis Intervention Service at VMH. The one-year-old pilot program was recently granted a year's extension by a unanimous vote of the hospital's board of directors.

Anyone can make use of the service from 4 p.m. to 12 midnight, seven days a week, regardless of the problem. Even those who just want somebody to talk to.

Many people think those who believe they need psychiatric treatment should see a head doctor, Beadleson says. "Boy," they think, "I must be the only one with this problem." Especially the adolescents. And sometimes the problem does go away with increased maturity.

This is a "Catch-22" situation, she says. Those who don't talk about their problems think no one else has it. And they won't find out the problem is shared by countless others unless they discuss it.

Many persons walk into the hospital's emergency room and ask for somebody to talk to, and the presence of a professional "ear" really helps.

Others have more severe problems. A family whose father is slowly dying, a person with severe clinical depression, or a lonely life culminating in a suicide attempt.

"These problems result in complaints of physical pain, such as headaches or nausea," Beadleson says. "And they are very real. Stress and anxiety intensifies pain. Stress and anxiety can slow normal bodily healing processes."

"There is a correlation between our mental state and our physical state of wellness," she said.

A common denominator she sees is a loss of self-esteem — a feeling the patient can no longer cope, that the problems have completely overwhelmed him. The failure to relate on an inter-personal basis can follow.

Counseling a person who has attempted suicide brings its own set of problems.

"There is always ambivalence in that, and that gives us a chance. I've never talked to a person who didn't have some part of them that didn't want to live. But people get their backs to the wall, and they feel there's no way to live."

Before the crisis intervention service was established, there was no place for troubled persons to seek psychiatric counseling.

Beadleson, Dr. Rhondalynn Summers and Eleanor Penner staff the crisis center from 4 p.m. to midnight. Persons can make use of the

Popular mobile homes win favor on rent control

Mobile homes have become an increasingly important part of the housing market in California as more people, caught between spiraling housing costs and fixed incomes, look for economical and convenient housing.

More than 22,000 mobile homes were sold in California last year; many — but not all — to elderly and retired persons.

It is the retired mobile home owner who has received a great deal of attention recently as the state senate considers a bill its backers call rent stabilization but its opponents call rent control and a threat to the industry.

Assembly bill 450, passed last June, would limit rent increases by mobile home park owners to "a reasonable rate of return on investment" and would allow and allow tenants to challenge in court any increases they thought were unfair.

The mobilehome owners association, the Golden State Mobilehome Owners A League (GSMOL) has sought to put the weight of its 92,000 members behind the bill and has hired a lobbyist to push it in Sacramento.

The Western Mobilehome Association of park owners has opposed the bill and some owners have said such controls would force them to close their parks and use the property in more profitable ways.

The GSMOL's regional director, H. N. "Woddy" Corbett, disagreed and said the bill was only designed to prevent owners from raising their rents faster than their costs increase.

"We're not against a fair rate of return on investment. This is not rent control, it's rent stabilization and there's a difference between the two," Corbett said.

But one resident of a local mobile home park disagreed saying owners would not want limits placed on their investments.

"If I owned a mobile home park and they limited me to so much money I'd just close the park and put something else on it," he said. The outcome of the mobile home rent bill could have a significant impact on a growing section of the housing market that many people know little about.

California has over 190,000 mobile home rental spaces in over 1,500 parks. Some are as small as 24 spaces, such as a few in the Valley. Others have over 900 spaces and resemble small cities. The newer parks built during the mobilehome boom of the last 15 years provide such amenities as community swimming pools, laundry facilities and recreation centers and have their own homeowners associations.

The largest Valley parks offer between 130 and 200 rental spaces and those contacted said they had no vacancies and long waiting lists. Most park managers cited the parks' conveniences and security as the reason for their popularity but most said extra activities attracted tenants as well.

The residents' associations, such as the one at Livermore's Sun Valley Mobile Estates, are self supporting and sponsor card games, bingo and dances for park residents. Its president, Emery Leonard described himself as wearing two hats at meetings; one as social organizer, one as the tenants' representative to the park's owner.

Sun Valley's managers, Douglas and Roberta Wyatt, described the 13-year-old park as mature and said tenants prefer such developments with established trees and greenery.

"Mobilehomes have been appreciating with time like real estate. You move in and the rule of thumb is can add $4,000 in value," said Wyatt.

Ironically, moving "mobilehomes" can be their biggest problem once situated in a park. However owners are still required to purchase licenses each year from the department of motor vehicles.

Once situated, a mobilehome is mobile in name only, offering low maintenance housing and community living for $125 to $165 per month in the Valley parks contacted.

Park owners and residents now wait to see if this lifestyle will be affected by legislation in Sacramento.

Public voice on lab work asked by UC

LIVERMORE — A University of California committee reviewing UC's relationship with nuclear weapons laboratories here and in New Mexico will hold public meetings in Livermore on Tuesday and Wednesday.

UC President David Saxon hopes the report, which will consider the relationship from UC's perspective, will be completed before the end of the year.

The university recently signed a five-year contract to continue operating the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory for the federal Energy Research and Development Administration.

Peace groups protested the contract, saying the labs should be converted to non-weapons work, such as the development of new types of energy.

The Tuesday hearing will be held from 8 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. in the multipurpose room of Almond Avenue School, located at 1401 Almond Ave. The committee will accept statements from the audience.

Wednesday's hearing, in which the public is not allowed to participate, will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the briefing room of Building 111 at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory.

Flag football threatened

Coaches of Livermore's flag football league are faced with cancelling this year's season because high insurance risks are in sight due to a recent incident in a LARPD softball game.

Previously the flag football program was run in conjunction with LARPD only because a league official, Joe Bradshaw, accepted insurance responsibilities.

The Alameda County Art Commission will meet at 2 p.m. Wednesday in Suite 536 of the county administration building, 1221 Oak St.

The board will hear a presentation on acquiring art for the new county building in Hayward.

Council tackles tax Tuesday

The property tax rate for the City of Pleasanton is slated for discussion at city council's first-ever Tuesday night meeting. Council convenes at 8 p.m. in chambers, 30 W. Angela St.

The current rate of $1.86 per $100 of assessed value, a nicker boost over the 1975-76 tax rate, may drop a bit as assessments in the city shot up some 21 per cent this year.

The rate must be set by Sept. 1.

Were kidnap victims hurt?

Prosecution charges that all 26 youngsters abducted in the bizarre Chowchilla mass kidnap were injured will be challenged in a hearing Aug. 26.

Friday's hearing in Alameda County Superior Court before Judge Leo Deegan of Riverside was continued in light of Thursday's contention by Madera County Dist. Atty. David Minier that all of the victims were injured in the kidnaping on July 15, 1976. James Schoenfeld, 25, his brother, Richard, 23, and Frederick Woods, 25, entered surprise guilty pleas July 25 to kidnap charges.

County fair '77 set several new records

PLEASANTON—It's official!

The Alameda County Fair rebounded sensationally after a dissolute run in 1976, caused primarily by picketing and a lack of racing.

County Fair '77 surpassed many existing records and established several new ones. While attendance of 403,542 did not quite match the record high of 1975 when 433,380 persons attended the Fair, 1977 revenues were up which tended to offset some of the losses sustained through the reduced attendance.

Racing fans at the Pleasanton Fair established a new total parimutuel handle for 12 days of racing at $12,934,382 for a daily average of $1,077,865, and a $101.06 per capita wager. The largest daily handle on record at Pleasanton, established on the final day of racing was $1,581,522. The 11th race of that day established a record for the largest amount ever bet on one single race at $159,636.

Four lucky fans won the largest daily double on record, when they hit the double for $6,025 each. The largest exacta wagered in the Fair's history was $130,945. The largest crowd in the grandstand on a single day set a new daily record as 18,521 fans attended the races on Saturday, July 2. Total admissions to the grandstand for the race meet of 127,922 exceeded the previous high of 122,688 set in 1975.

Attendance for the 15-day run of the Fair was down 29,838 from the record year of 1975, but established a second highest record as 403,542 patrons graced the Fairgrounds, surpassing the '76 Fair by 181,667, or 82 per cent. Revenue from paid admissions in '77 exceeded the 1975 high by $61,622. Income from parking was up 8.9 per cent which Secretary-Manager Lee Hall reports, "reflects a trend among the public away from the car pool concept of the 'gas lines' so prevalent during the gas shortage in 1975."

Anticipated income from admissions and parking were $763,000, an increase of 14 per cent over the previous high of $667,000 posted two years ago.

Over $134,000 in gross sales from the 406 animals sold at the Junior Livestock Auction also set a new mark for the Fair. A record $5.50 per pound for the 4-H champion steer bought by rancher Carl Zwissing of Sunol, brought $6,710 for one lucky exhibitor.

Professional entertainment attractions presented twice daily, free of charge to Fair patrons in the Amphitheatre, played to capacity crowds throughout.

With stage attractions changing every other day, the Fair patron was treated to such headliner attractions as Jose Feliciano, Skiles and Henderson, The Treniers, Freddie Fender, John Byner, and Shari Lewis with Lamb Chop. Johnny Rivers' high-diving aqua-mules and Dick Harward's working border collies proved to be popular special attractions along with the always-popular Mitchell Marionettes and Charlie Allen's Pettin Zoo.

A total of 5,711 paid admissions was recorded for the Destruction Derby on the last Sunday of the Fair, presented this year by Ron Ail of Valley Sports.

Completely restored after its original showing at the Fair two years ago, the 1905 Best Steam Tractor returned through the courtesy of the Oakland Museum. A surprise visit to the Fair for the grand showing was Mrs. Viola Best Webster, the sole surviving member of the Best family that invented and developed the tractor.

Preview Night was attended by almost 600. Proceeds from the evening of viewing exhibits while being served champagne and hors d'oeuvres were donated to the Mulberry Branch of Children's Hospital.

Pseudo-Atlantian Nicole Puccetti, 3, beams at her swimming certificate as much as she does at the thought of another lap in the aquatic center's 25-meter pool.

Pleasanton aquatic tots

Nicole, 3, earns her 'duckskin'

PLEASANTON — They slip through water with the aplomb and comfort of present day Atlantians. None is more than knee-high to an instructor.

"Do these little kids really learn to swim?" ask parents wet with trepidation. Does McDonald's make a burger?

The proof is watching 4, 5 or 6-year-olds cut gracefully through crystal water their smiles outshining the sun's glint.

Take 3-year-old Nicole Puccetti. Take her to the water. Watch her bound with pleasure as she bounces into her first 25-meter (81-foot) lap. Note the smile as she gently rolls on her back to float, rest and regain her strength. After all, it's her third lap of the day.

It's part of the city's aquatic program begun seven years ago when the Black Avenue center opened.

Nicole is in a pre-school, "tot" class. And graduating with honors.

At 3-years-old, she's the youngest the center has taught.

The pre-school program teaches the complete Red Cross Beginner course. But instructors, led by Dolores Bengston of the city's recreation department, have geared teaching and progress to younger children.

After beginners, the kids are on to advanced beginners or the center's special "superswimmer" class.

"Grouping this younger group of good swimmers together also allows the continuation of a positive learning situation," says Bengston, "rather than placing them in classes with much older, stronger children."

The center also offers "parent-tot" programs for kids up to 4-years-old. Parent $ joins child in the water to reinforce the wet adjustment and the development of swimming skills.

More than 3,000 sets of "learn-to-swim" lessons will be given this year. That means about 1,500 to 1,800 kids.

Basking in the sun soaked Amador Valley, the city's share is totally disproportionate to the Southern Alameda County population.

Of some 1,600 learn-to-swim classes offered in the south county area, 400 will be in Pleasanton.

The center reserves 3 1/2 hours each day during the summer for lessons, and has 12 instructors and another dozen aides teaching at all times. Both instructors and their aides are certified by the National American Red Cross.

All courses are taught within Red Cross standards.

"Large classes are meaningless," says Bengston, "unless both content and quality are maintained. Despite the large number participating, the average class size is eight, and each class content is carefully taught with only those who complete all skills given course certificates."

The center's goal is "to make all community youth safe both in and about the water," she says.

New sessions begin tomorrow and Aug. 22.

Registration for classes still open is available at the center during posted office hours.

Registration for the fall learn-to-swim sessions begins Aug. 14.

Phone worker's strike averted in agreement

WASHINGTON AP — A nationwide walkout by 500,000 Bell System telephone workers was averted Saturday by agreement on a new three-year contract with the Communications Workers of America. Two smaller unions continued to negotiate against a strike deadline of 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

The tentative settlement would provide a 31 per cent increase in wages and benefits, CWA President Glenn E. Watts announced. He said it was "in line with recent agreements in the steel and auto industries."

Meanwhile, negotiators for 120,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and 70,000 members of the Telecommunications International Union continued talks with the company.

A Bell spokesman expressed optimism there would be no strike by the two smaller unions. "I don't see how any disagreements at this point could lead to a strike," he said.

The agreement with the CWA was reached after federal mediators joined the virtual around-the-clock negotiations. "This $3.3 billion agreement touches on every significant demand that this union's policymaking body said that we must come to grips with in 1977," Watts said.

He said the agreement was reached through a "negotiating breakthrough" achieved after he called a news conference Thursday to say a strike was almost inevitable.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co., parent firm of the Bell System, said it was "gratified" by the new pact. "We believe is a good wage and benefit package," AT&T said in a statement. Announcing the new pact, Watts said, "I believe that we have achieved a remarkable settlement — particularly in view of the recent down-trend in the size of new labor-management contracts and the general sluggishness of the economy."

Asked whether consumers' phone bills will go up as a result of the settlement, Watts said, "I don't have any doubt that the telephone companies will have to go for rate increases."

County planners mull future urban guides

Alameda County Planning Commission will conduct a work session tomorrow on what could be an extremely far-reaching policy affecting all future urban development in the state.

The commission will meet at 1:30 p.m. in the county public works building, 399 Elmhurst, Hayward.

The policy is to be adopted by the state Legislature and the governor's administration, but so far it is in draft form and comments are being solicited from county planning departments, especially in the urbanized areas.

Some 13 policies and 46 specific implementations are being recommended. Their thrust is toward filling up empty land in cities, then encouraging only growth that is contiguous to cities. Only as a last resort would prime agricultural lands be permitted to develop, says the proposed policy.

Two policy statements are at the heart of the plan. One says that the various counties' Local Agency Formation Commissions "shall guide new urban development to areas within and contiguous to existing urban areas."

The other says that the "adverse effects of government actions on the citizens of surrounding jurisdictions shall be minimized; all affected communities shall be able to participate in development decisions."

If there are any lawsuits over disputed development areas, a local government council like ABAG would be empowered to appoint an arbiter to change plans and development proposals.

The document's suggestions about tax money sharing are also significant. The policy suggests pooling of up to 50 per cent of increases in industrial and commercial assessed valuation on the basis of need among communities in a region. New legislation would be needed to do it.

An increase in sales tax revenues also would result in pooling the rewards in various metropolitan areas that have problems to solve.

The document also talks about the adverse economic impact which new regional shopping centers have on the downtown areas of adjacent cities and suggests a split of the regional center's sales tax bonanzas among the affected cities. It's similar to a bill introduced earlier this year by Pleasanton's Democratic Assemblyman, Floyd Mori.

Other policy suggestions include: encouraging revitalizing and conservation of urban neighborhoods; public facilities to have schedules for maintenance and replacement; size of state-funded facilities shall be based on population projections consistent with regional needs and state development policies; state capital outlays shall encourage urban development in existing and contiguous urban areas.

Other points include: the state developing "mechanisms to accommodate needed urban development while protecting air and water quality"; don't leapfrog commercial and industrial development away from existing urban development; direct federal programs toward urban development; and local urban development decisions shall consider identified regional needs for housing, industrial sites and regional public facilities.

Valley obituaries

Alfred Petersen

Livermore native Alfred Petersen, 81, died in Santa Cruz last week after a coronary attack.

He will be buried at 11:30 a.m. today in Livermore Memorial Gardens, Livermore. The funeral was held yesterday at United Presbyterian Church in Felton.

Petersen lived all but the last 10 years of his life in Livermore and worked for the Livermore schools. He was a member of the Oddfellow's Encampment, the Rebeccas, Dandebod, the Foresters of America, and the American Legion.

He is survived by his wife, Lois; sons John Petersen of San Jose; Dr. Alfred Petersen, Salt Lake City; Rev. James Petersen, Beaverton, Ore.; a brother, Clarence Petersen, Los Gatos; and eight grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, the family prefers gifts to a favorite charity.

Thomas Paynter

SAN RAMON — Thomas L. Paynter, 49, a native of California and resident of San Ramon for 11 years, died in a Livermore hospital on Friday, Aug. 5, 1977.

He had been employed for the past 28 years by Pacific Gas and Electric Company and was the son of the late Percy Paynter of Oakland.

Survivors include his wife, Shirley Paynter, and son, Christopher Paynter, both of Livermore; two daughters, Linda Hahn of Livermore and Susan Waller of Castro Valley; his mother, Mrs. Thelma Paynter of Oakland; a brother, Richard Paynter of Fremont; and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Hazel McGinty of Oakland, and one grandson, Tyler Hahn of Livermore.

Funeral services will be held Monday, Aug. 8, 1977, at 1:30 p.m., in the Gothic Chapel of Mt. View Cemetery, 5000 Piedmont Ave., Oakland.

Private interment will follow in Mt. View Cemetery.

The family prefers contributions to the California Hi Boosters Club, in-care of William Farrance, 106 Bell-Meade Place, San Ramon (94583).

Local arrangements are by the Graham-Hitch Mortuary, Pleasanton.

City recall leader levels new charges

LIVERMORE — City council recall leader Paul Tull claims that five CARD committee raffle tickets turned up missing when sheriff's deputies returned his personal possessions they secured after Tull's court ordered psychiatric examination.

Judge Mark Eaton ordered the mental exam after Tull accused him of extortion Wednesday during Tull's hearing for some traffic violations.

This is the second time Tull has claimed his personal possessions were tampered with while in custody of law enforcement officials. The other alleged theft happened last month when Tull said some 1,900 recall signatures were lifted from the trunk of his car while it was impounded by Livermore Police.

After Tull was found to be rational and competent by Alameda County authorities, he was processed out of Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center at 3:30 a.m. Thursday. It was then he refused to sign for his possessions because of the missing raffle tickets valued at $1 each.

"There were 20 when I sealed the envelope," Tull said. "The original envelope was grey but the one they gave me at Santa Rita was cream colored."

The recall leader said his rights were violated at Wednesday's hearing because Judge Eaton carried out provisions for the mental evaluation in an open court.

Tull quoted Welfare and Institutions code section 5200 as saying, "The provisions shall be carried out with the utmost consideration of the privacy and dignity of the alleged of mental disorder."

Tull said he will represent himself at the jury trial Aug. 10 because he "can't afford to buy justice."

Top livestock 'showpersons'

Operational, criminal justice plans win Alameda County honor

OAKLAND — Alameda County won an achievement award recently at the 42nd annual conference of the National Association of Counties in Detroit.

The awards are given annually to counties for innovative programs which led to more efficient government.

Alameda County won its awards for integrated purchasing and stores, alcoholism counseling in the criminal justice system, mobile health prevention services, mental health placement and salary and employee benefits information.

The alcoholism program was expanded to include rehabilitation services for the inmates of Santa Rita Jail. Services include individual and group counseling, work therapy, adult education, recreational activities and referral to community resources.

The program had 256 admissions from April to December, 1976 and 65 percent of them accepted referral to later treatment.

The mobile prevention health service is a health screening project for persons 60 and over who do not have regular access to medical care. The project uses a van staffed with public health nurses, health service aides, a Spanish interpreter, a medical clerk and volunteers.

The advance in mental health placement consisted of a centralized unit to place and monitor mental patients and facilities. It serves not only the mentally ill, but has been expanded to all county public health services.

The salary information streamline involved reducing 9,800 full time equivalent positions to a computer system so that much less time is involved in processing the preliminary paperwork needed in presenting the annual budget to supervisors. The computer system also gives more labor relations data than was available previously.

Alameda County Supervisor Fred Cooper of Alameda County accepted an achievement award on behalf of Alameda County at the annual conference of the National Association of Counties in Detroit recently.

Valley cities sharing state-collected taxes

Livermore and Pleasanton picked up $75,449 from state-collected taxes during July, while Alameda County received $829,261.

From the July apportionment of highway users taxes, which totaled $53 million, Livermore received $18,751, Pleasanton got $13,015, and Alameda County was given $539,340. Nearly $30 million of the total was spent on state highways; $1.2 million went to the Bagley Conservation Fund, and $30,000 to the bicycle lane account.

Gasoline taxes provided almost $50 million. Diesel fuel taxes supplied $3.2 million, with the remainder from miscellaneous sources.

The total amount of tax revenues available for July was $22.5 million less than that for the preceding month.

Motor vehicle license fees provided another $9.6 million in tax revenues. Of this amount, Livermore received $13,958, Pleasanton got $9,595, and the county was given $248,972.

The license fees provided a total of $9.6 million. This money is returned to local governments based on the adjusted 1970 federal census.

The cigarette tax fund provided a total of $7.1 million. Livermore got $12,272, Pleasanton received $7,858, and Alameda County was given $40,949.

New con game hits elderly

Persons posing as Social Security workers are stealing from the homes of senior citizens they visit under the guise of helping the elderly victims with their checks, the sheriff's department has warned.

Lt. Ed Volpe said there have been two confirmed cases in Livermore this last week. There are unsubstantiated reports of similar occurrences in southern Contra Costa County.

A phone call to potential victims says there may be some problem with social security payments, or that a change in benefits is upcoming. An appointment is made to discuss the matter.

Two persons, usually a man and a woman, appear at the home. While one "worker" keeps the victim busy, the other goes through the home and takes what he needs.

Any persons receiving such calls are urged to contact the police department. Reports can be kept confidential.

National park unit elects EBRP's chief to office

Richard C. Trudeau, general manager of the East Bay Regional Park District, has been elected first vice president of the National Association of County Park and Recreation Officials (NACPRO).

NACPRO held its election of 1977-78 officers in conjunction with the National Association of Counties (NAC) annual conference in Detroit July 23-27.

The organization was established in 1964 to promote an exchange of information among county officials involved in planning, developing and preserving county park and recreation resources. The group's primary goal is to seek more effective use of both public and private land.

BCDC board votes to nix Delta Canal

By PAT KEEBLE
Lesher News Bureau
SAN FRANCISCO — Conditional opposition to the Peripheral Canal was voted Thursday by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission, which wants better guarantees for San Francisco Bay.

The motion passed on a 14-7 vote, with three of the no votes arguing the motion wasn't strong enough.

The three, including Contra Costa Supervisor Nancy Fahden, Martinez, argued for straight opposition to the canal, regardless of conditions that might lessen the damage to the Delta caused by loss of fresh water.

The other four wanted the resolution worded as the BCDC staff had recommended it — in support of legislation providing for the canal, but with similar conditions.

The decision came after two hours of discussion, led off by Gerald Meral, deputy state Department of Water Resources director. He urged a vote in favor of SB 346, the new state water package bill that includes the canal.

Meral stressed the need for the bill's provision that the canal would not be built until there are guarantees that federal water would be used to help maintain bay and Delta water quality standards, since the federal government controls most of the water moving through the Delta.

"If we don't get the cooperation from the federal government, we will continue to have degradation of the Delta," Meral said. Without such an agreement, he added, it would be impossible to regulate water to provide outflows needed to flush salt water out of Suisun Marsh and San Francisco Bay.

But San Francisco Supervisor Diane Feinstein said there is still inadequate provision for the bay, partly because of a lack of knowledge about what the bay needs. She urged that the measure be held over for interim study, rather than rushed through the legislature this year.

Meral said the administration is still hoping to get it passed this year.

Fahden said the bill would provide only for export from the Delta of "surplus" water, but she said she has been unable to get a satisfactory definition of what water is surplus.

"Surplus water is what the law says it is, and that would be established by the state Water Quality Control Board," Meral answered.

Cressy Nakagawa, speaking for the Contra Costa Supervisors' water agency, urged the commission to join it in outright opposition to the bill.

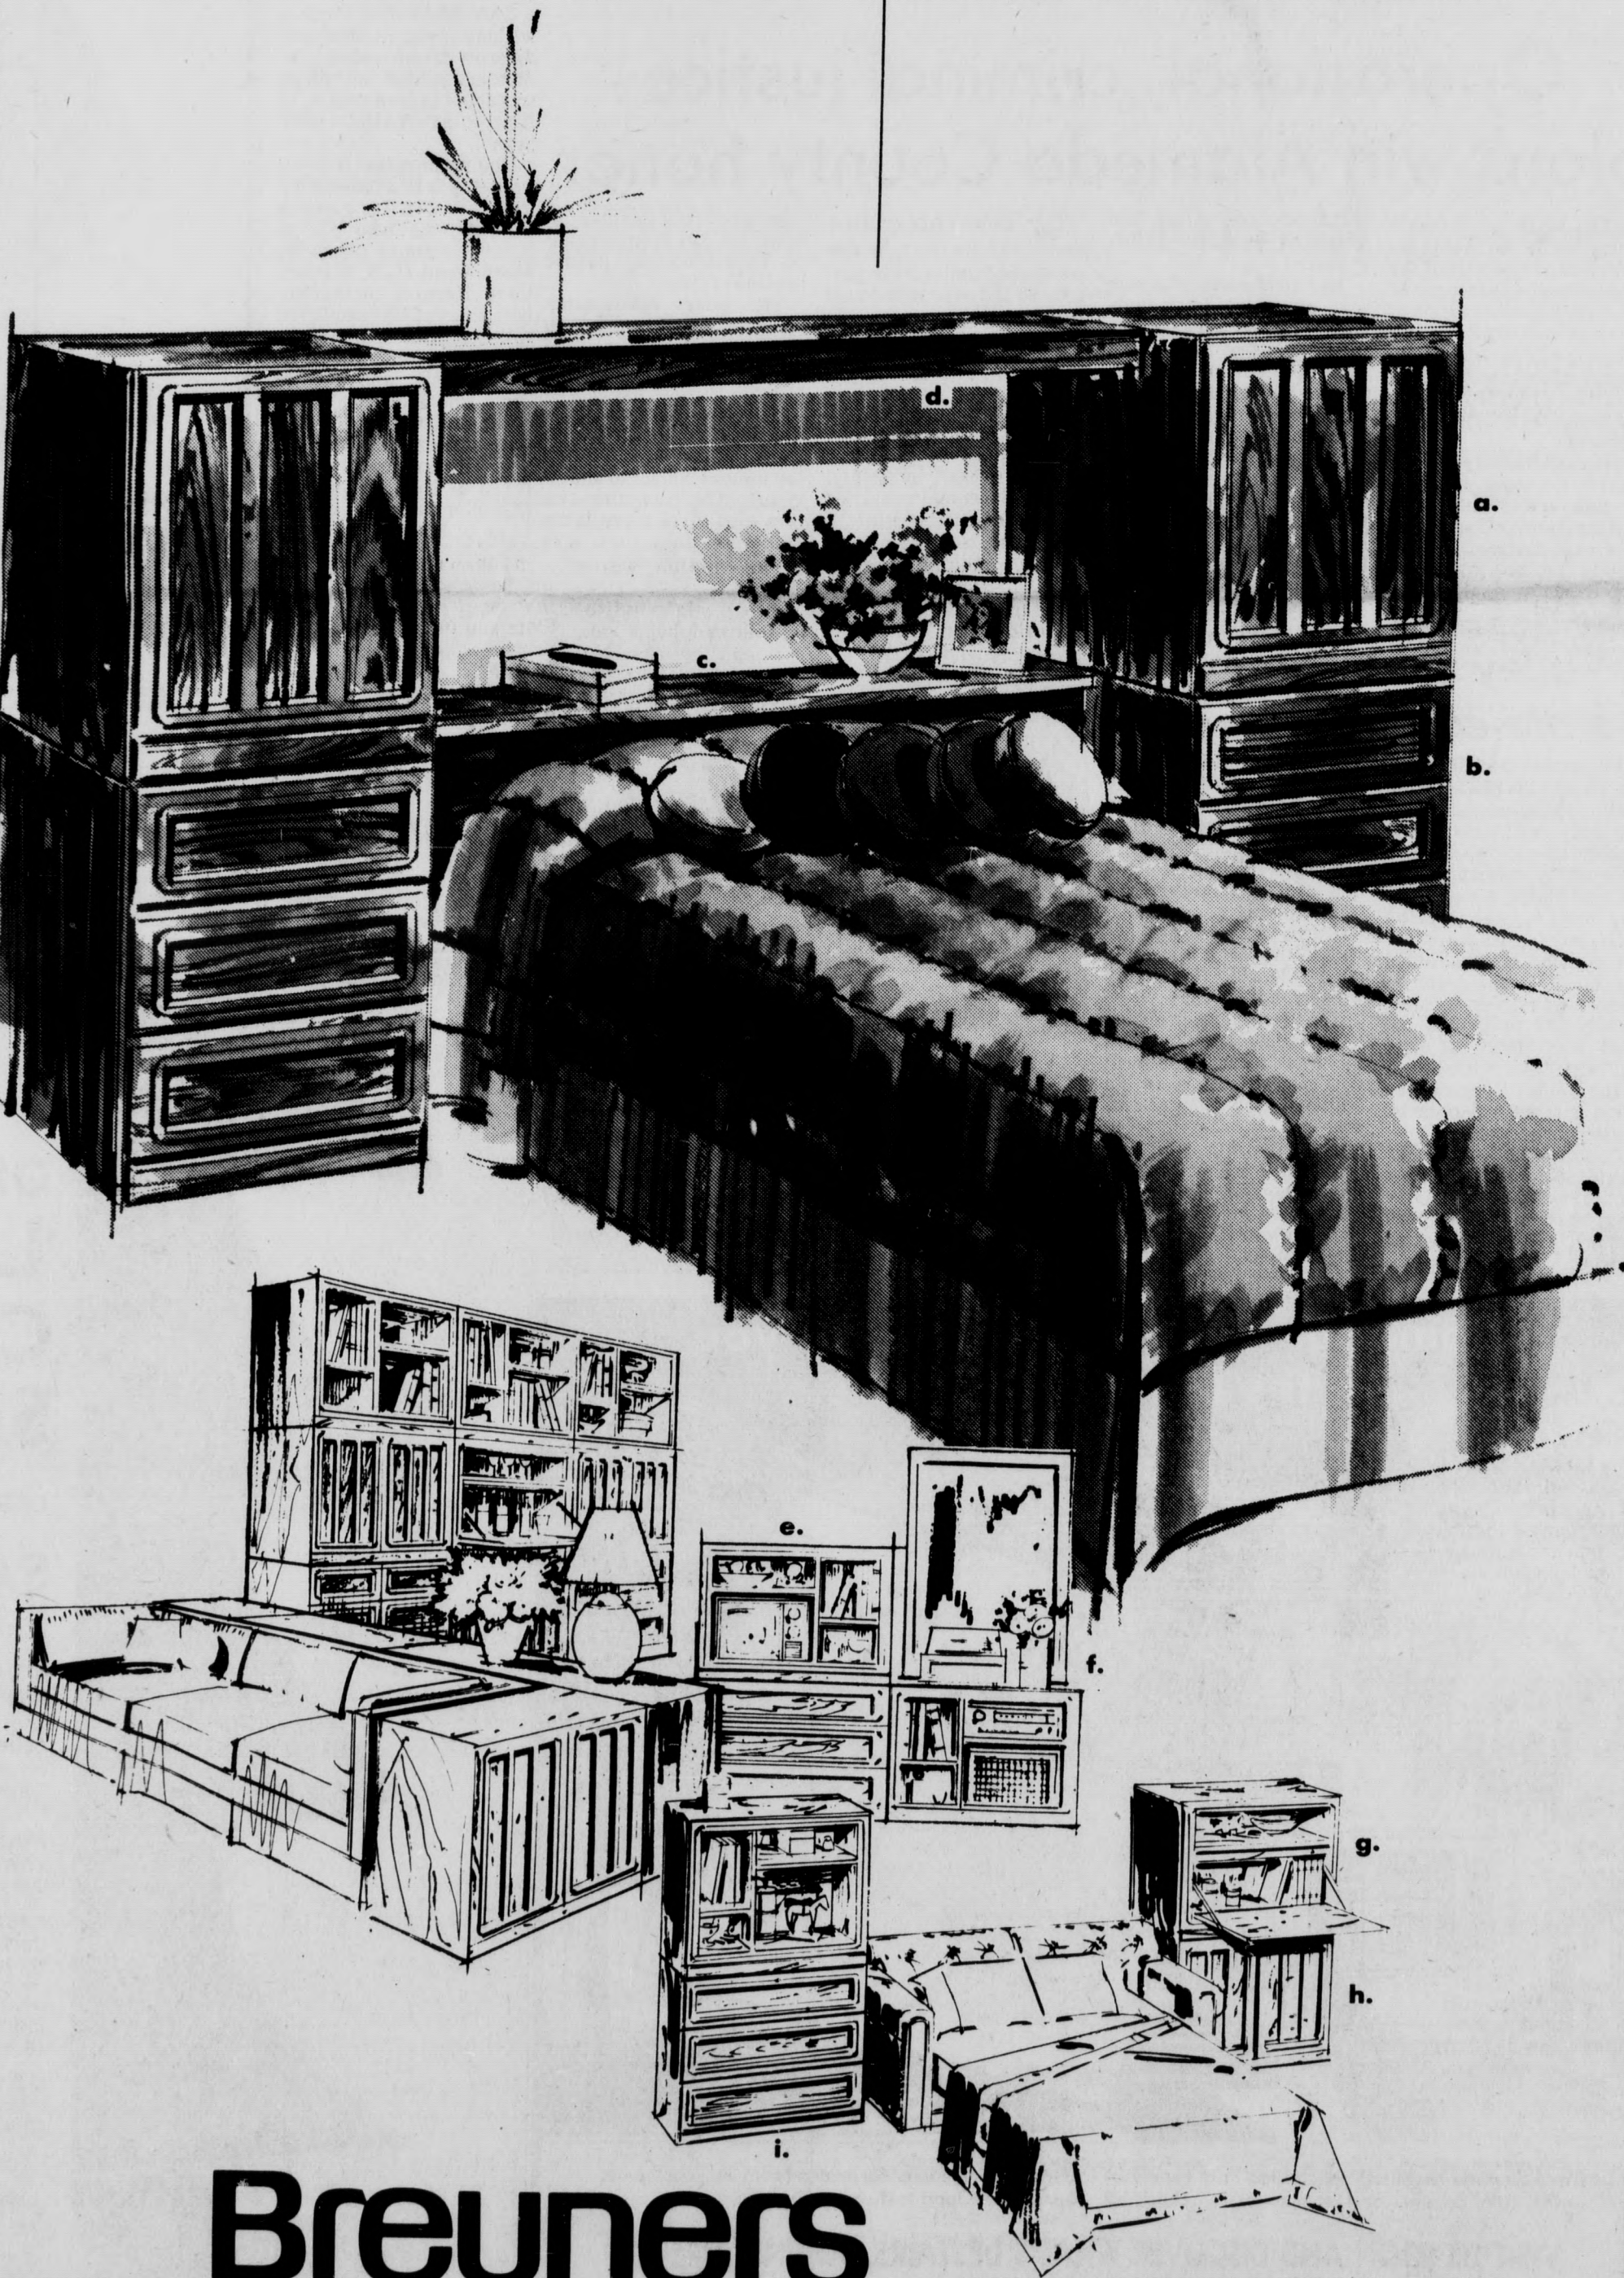

"You have to know what the standards will be, and you don't need SB 346 to get Congress to act" on a cooperative program, Nakagawa said.

The motion by San Francisco Supervisor Quentin Kopp expresses opposition to SB 346 unless it is amended to include a finding that San Francisco Bay must have fresh water outflows, to declare the state's intention to protect the bay from harmful diversions, and to make other changes assuring bay water quality.

Rape rap tackles women's concerns

Rape is a four-letter word more obscene to many women than anything scrawled across vacant-lot walls. Rape, to its victims, is a humiliation so great it affects some for a lifetime.

The Valley is fortunate that rape is not a pressing problem here, according to local law enforcement agencies.

In the last three and one-half years, 14 women have reported rape in Pleasanton, 21 in Livermore and six others in unincorporated

She said rapists go out of their way to injure and degrade their victim. "Rape is usually accompanied by beating and other humiliating acts I don't want to even mention," said Garner.

SACWAR suggests victims call its hotline, 582-RAPE, anytime from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Garner said someone could be in the area within an hour. "Call us — call someone," she emphasized.

She said a volunteer from SACWAR will help victims to the hospital, talk to the police and take them through court if they decide to report the rape.

"We do not encourage victims to report or not to. The decision is left to them. Our concern is with the victims," Garner explained.

There are a number of reasons women do not report the crime, according to Garner.

Garner said many women do not want anyone to know what terrible things they were forced to do. Others are unable to give a detailed description of the attacker.

And, as is the case with more than half the rapes, the victim knows the rapist, a boyfriend, neighbor or relative, but is hesitant to report for numerous reasons.

The other big reason is that many women don't want to go through a court proceeding that could take over a year, with odds it will not result in a rape conviction.

In Pleasanton, of the 14 cases, suspects were known in seven. Of these, four have gone to court. Three have been successfully prosecuted and convicted.

Garner cited statistics in San Francisco that show only one rape and six assault convictions in over 500 reported rapes.

Both Garner and Paulson said the best way to defend yourself in a possible rape situation is to keep cool.

"Keep your cool so if there is a chance to talk him out of it or get away, you don't miss it," said Garner.

Often there is nothing a woman can do to fight back. Garner said the "average attacker" weighs his victim by 30 pounds, and is four inches taller. She suggested that if you can break some glass, especially large plate windows, it will likely attract a lot of attention.

If you have been raped, by all means go to the hospital whether or not you want to prosecute, said Paulson.

She said it is important to be examined for VD, crabs and pregnancy. "You needn't tell the hospital you've been raped course," said Paulson.

If you do want to prosecute, Garner said you should not wait longer than 12 hours to get to the hospital, and tell them you have been raped. It is also important, she said, not to clean-up beforehand. That can often destroy evidence police can use in a rape prosecution.

Valley Memorial Hospital will do a rape exam in its emergency room.

Drug problem?

Over $8 billion are spent on prescription and over-the-counter drugs in the United States annually.

During the last decade, spending on prescription drugs has nearly doubled. Each year, an average of five prescriptions are written for every man, woman and child in the country.

Because of the importance of drugs to consumers, both financially as well as in terms of their physical well-being, the California Dept. of Consumer Affairs has recently published "Drugs," a pamphlet discussing the purchase and use of over-the-counter and prescription drugs.

Smith studied voice for 10 years, first in Virginia, then in San Francisco at the Conservatory of Music. He appeared in the musical review "Standing Room Only" in the city for over 1400 performances in a little over a year, and has also worked in night clubs and cabaret.

Wayne recently finished a feature role in the Valley Performing Arts Company's premiere production of "Carnival."

Tickets are now on sale for the Pleasanton Playhouse production, which bows August 12 at the Amador Valley High auditorium, followed by a gala champagne reception.

The show will continue August 13, 17, 18, 19 and 20 at Amador, then move to Chabot College in Hayward for performances Aug. 23, 27, Sept. 2 and 3.

For more information on single or group tickets, call 846-3202, ext. 215.

—by Al Fischer

However, rape is a more serious problem than those numbers represent. Detective Patricia Nordin of the Pleasanton Police said she thinks only one-half of rapes committed in the city are ever reported. In Livermore, Detective Richard Sibley said he estimates one in four is reported.

Rape is prevalent enough that over 20 area women attended a recent rape rap held here by Southern Alameda County Women Against Rape (SACWAR).

Shirley Paulson and Charlotte Garner of SACWAR talked about the legal, emotional and physical aspects of the crime.

First, they emphasized, rape is not just a sex crime, but also a crime of violence. "One of the big problems — the most lasting — is the emotional effect on the victim," said Garner.

Since drug prices can vary as much as 1200 percent, depending on the pharmacy and the drug's manufacturer, the pamphlet discusses generic drugs, how to save money buying drugs, and how to choose a pharmacy.

A pharmacy shopping survey is also included to assist consumers in choosing the pharmacy which best suits their needs.

In addition, the pamphlet outlines precautions to follow when using drugs. State and federal agencies which can help consumers who have complaints against pharmacies or drug manufacturers are also listed.

The 16-page illustrated pamphlet is available free of charge by sending a self-addressed envelope to DRUGS, Box 310, Sacramento, CA 95814.

Surrounded by local women, Shirley Paulson and Charlotte Garner of SACWAR discuss varied aspects of rape.

Wayne Smith, Glenn DuBose and Don Wilson of "Gypsy."

Showbiz variety in 'Gypsy's' soul

"Gypsy," the Pleasanton Playhouse summer musical, has become a prime learning experience under the direction of three men who transform printed words and stage directions into sight and sound for an audience's enjoyment.

Glenn DuBose is the show's director, a position which makes him responsible for the overall look of the production. It is up to him what the concept will be, how and where the actors will move, and what the characterizations will be. In the final analysis, he is the first one to make the show "go."

DuBose brings a well-rounded background to the task. As a drama major at Stanford University he developed the groundwork for a career in the dramatic arts. When he went into the Army for two years, he hosted his own television talk show in San Antonio, Texas, featuring live entertainment three nights a week.

Back into civilian life, Glenn joined the Kennebunkport Playhouse in Maine as the resident juvenile. In the next few years he led an admirable, if hectic, existence; touring in a show with Linda Darnell, working with David Merrick in the national company of "The World of Suzie Wong," directing Imogene Coca, working directly under the famous choreographer Michael Kidd, and performing in an extravaganza at the New York World's Fair.

"One year I had 32 W-2 forms from all my jobs," DuBose relates.

During an extended leave-of-absence, was offered a teaching job at Chabot College in Hayward, and after a trial run decided to stay. "Now I try to combine both worlds. I love teaching and helping with school shows, then I'm off half a year to work elsewhere. It revitalizes me in working with my students."

Don Wilson is "Gypsy's" choreographer. It is up to him to breathe life into the musical numbers, working with the performers to create dances that fit the tune, mood of the show, and the performers special talents.

Wilson has lived the discipline of dance for many years. He took his training in Los Angeles, where he also performed professionally. Before moving to Pleasanton from Concord, he became involved in the Diablo Light Opera Company.

Wilson is no stranger to stage lights and cameras, either. As an Equity member (an actor's union) in San Francisco, he does regular film and television work, performing in ".....any film that comes to town." Recently, he did 14 episodes of "The Streets of San Francisco" with Karl Malden.

After finishing work with "Gypsy," Wilson will begin planning the choreography for the Diablo Light Opera Company's production of "No, No Nanette," in which he'll play a leading role.

But for now, "Gypsy" is foremost in his thoughts. "This has always been one of my favorite shows," he says. "There's lots of children in it, for one thing. I had a dance studio for seven years, plus I have five of my own. Also, the beat in "Gypsy" makes it easy to create dances. The important part of any choreography is that it's all together, that it's crisp and sharp."

Wayne Smith is the production's vocal coach and music coordinator. His job is to work out song with the performers, arrange singing to fit the various voices, and work with musical director Mark Lepiane to bring singers and musicians together in a cohesive way.

Smith studied voice for 10 years, first in Virginia, then in San Francisco at the Conservatory of Music. He appeared in the musical review "Standing Room Only" in the city for over 1400 performances in a little over a year, and has also worked in night clubs and cabaret.

Do you have a hero?

Scott Collier, dish washer, Livermore: "Rocky" because he's an Italian.

Jonathan Hebben, student, Livermore: Sean Cassidy — he's in the "Hardy Boys" and he's a good singer.

Deanna Howard, housewife, San Ramon: Elvis 'cause he's cute.

Rob Billings, student, San Ramon: Marie Osmond — she's a good singer and she's 16.

Mary Lutz, retired, Pleasanton: Sen. Hubert Humphrey. He just went through a terrible operation and I think he does a lot of good.

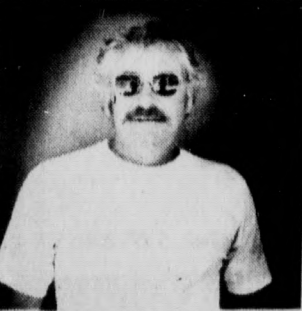

Tom Daley, student, Pleasanton: Not one person.

Mike Judkins, graphic artist, Pleasanton: Starsky and Hutch because they're so virile — I especially like it when they shoot those big guns.

Aubrey Robertson, contractor, Pleasanton: How about the President? He's a Democrat.

One of the nearly three dozen picture poems of Kenneth Patchen reproduced in vivid color in "The Argument of Innocence".

Poems to picture children's souls

If I ever have my birthday party again, I am going to invite Kenneth Patchen. Actually, he will be in charge of sending out the invitations, because the picture poems he drew when he was alive are luminous invitations to everyone's birthday party and they have all the disarming charm and important optimism of that very special age. (Thomas Aquinas said we reach the age of reason at seven, so I think that six is the ideal age.)

It's not easy to describe Patchen's work in words. You really have to see the picture poems to enjoy them fully and that's why I have asked the Lifestyle editor to include one with this review. And our black and white coverage doesn't do the blazing colors of the original any justice at all. In fact the big news about "The Argument of Innocence" is that it is the very first book about Patchen's work to be done in color. The nearly three dozen picture poems are worth the price of the book alone, nay, more than worth it. As a bonus, you get the story of how Patchen shifted from a poet of the word to one of the picture poem, combining image and word splendidly and giving us the view from that subterranean soul we left behind in childhood.

Patchen, who died in 1972 after more than a dozen years bedridden, lived his later life in Palo Alto and the press which has brought forth this wonderful book dwells in Oakland and the author, Peter Veres, lives in Berkeley, making this internationally important work of art a totally Bay Area effort. The text shows a person who lived in poverty most of his life, totally dedicated to his art, transcending the wracking pain of a spinal ailment to create something so childlike and simple, but so advanced artistically, that only a stone could not be moved by it.

A dozen originals of these poems are on display now at Books Plus, 3910 24th St., San Francisco until August 12 and afterward at Stacy's, 581 Market St., San Francisco. From time to time, Patchen's widow, Miriam, will be reading from his work, so keep an eye peeled in the Chronicle Sunday Pink for it. Most of Patchen's work has been placed in a collection at UC Santa Cruz.

Water saving garden tips

Saving water in gardening depends largely on location, soil and types of plants. A new University of California publication, "Saving Water in Landscape Irrigation," takes these factors into account to help California gardeners answer irrigation questions according to their own situation.

Types of soil are described so homeowners can determine the water storage capacity of their particular soil. The leaflet also helps homeowners determine the rate at which plants in different locations use water.

Most water applied to plants goes out through the leaves in the form of water vapor or evaporates from the soil, a process called evapotranspiration. Since it is influenced by climate, sunlight, temperature, humidity and wind, evapotranspiration is different in various locations and from season to season. Tables in the leaflet give the rate in specific areas month by month.

Some plants are water spenders, others are water conservers and the leaflet gives examples of each. It also tells how to check the soil, how to apply water and how much to use. It even tells what to do if there isn't enough water.

For a free copy of this leaflet, send a postcard request to "Saving Water in Landscape Irrigation, Leaflet 2976, Box 1629, Richmond, Ca, 94802.

Flank steak is special treat

The big demand for flank steak and the fact that there are only two per beef carcass affects both availability and price. There is no waste in this lean boneless muscle which may weigh between 1½ and 2½ pounds. A marinated flank steak is indeed a special treat for the barbecue season. It's a great family steak and is easy to cut into thin diagonal slices across the grain to get look alike servings. The flavor is great.

hours or overnight in mixture of catsup, vinegar, wine, Worcestershire sauce, onion, garlic, mustard and oil. Drain, reserving marinade. Broil or barbecue steak to rare or medium rare. Meanwhile combine marinade with bouillon cube, water and cornstarch. Heat, stirring until sauce boils and thickens. Slice beef diagonally across the grain. Serve with sauce. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MARINATED FLANK STEAK

- 1 beef flank steak
- ½ cup catsup
- ½ cup red wine vinegar
- ½ cup red table wine
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 small clove garlic, crushed
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- 1 tablespoon cooking oil
- 1 beef bouillon cube
- ½ cup water
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch

Consumer unit eyes coffee ban

The Alameda County Consumer Affairs Commission will meet at 1111 Jackson Street, Oakland, at 9:15 a.m. Aug. 11 and hear a long list of committee reports on various topics.

The coffee boycott is still going along, with Betty Moose expected to give a report on the Anything But Coffee drive. Reports also are scheduled from ad hoc committees on nursing homes, food stamps, and conservation and resources.

Women's poetry needed

Women writers are invited to submit their poetry for the third annual publication of "Women Talking, Women Listening," a poetry anthology designed to provide exposure for women writers, and to encourage more women to write about other women, and about their own experiences.

Poetry will be accepted until Aug. 15. Notification of acceptance will be sent by Oct. 5 with publication in November. Although no poets will be paid, each contributor will receive a free copy and an invitation to attend an all day poetry fest where poets will share and read their own works.

To submit as many as four poems send four copies of each work with name, address and telephone number on each page to WTWL, 7781 Ironwood Dr., Dublin, Ca. 94566.

Bay Area smog inspectors gain muscle

By RUSS YARROW
Lester News Bureau

SAN FRANCISCO — The Bay Area Smog Board this week bestowed its 44 smog inspectors with broad powers of access to industrial facilities in the nine-county district.

Under the new regulation, the inspectors shall have "reasonable" access to the premises of industrial polluters in the course of their monitoring duties.

The new regulation was unanimously adopted by the district's Board of Directors after sparking heavy discussion at its previous two meetings.

Before this action, district 6 inspectors were often rebuffed at some facilities' doors when they requested entrance for inspection. The district's Air Pollution Control Officer then had to go through court to get a civil inspection warrant.

"This isn't intended to be a means of harassment," said district spokesman Ted McHugh. "It's intended to spell out the fact that when you have inspectors you have the need for inspection."

Inspection of most of the 40,000 industrial polluters in the district isn't a problem, said McHugh, but there are exceptions, including Standard Oil in Richmond.

That company, he said, has continually denied access to district inspectors and has over 500 possible pollution points at the Richmond plant.

The district is taking action against Standard, claiming that it's producing 90,000 more barrels of oil a day than authorized and that it is exceeding state limits on emissions of nitrous oxides, sulfur dioxide and other pollutants.

The new action gives inspectors free reign to enter an industrial site when they see the need, said McHugh, but industrial bosses might still refuse access.

In that case, they would also be slapped with violation notices of the new regulation.

McHugh said the new regulation will take effect immediately. The district's new access rules were adopted only months after the Board of Directors instituted a new permit system for existing industries.

New industries have always been required to get permits before they could operate, to insure they complied with smog regulations.

But the district passed new rules that require existing industries to obtain permits now also, which was seen as a move toward tighter control over polluters.

A representative of the Western Oil and Gas Association called the new smog rule revisions "unnecessary and a potential source of unwarranted litigation," claiming that no other smog agency's regulations are that restrictive.

Drive begins for contributions to restore Mt. Diablo greenery

WALNUT CREEK — With more than a third of Mt. Diablo State Park scorched and lost to a four-day fire that roared through pastures, valleys and canyons of Mt. Diablo, The Times has inaugurated a public "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund."

Serving as co-chairmen of the public fund-raising campaign are Concord's Mayor Richard LaPointe, Mayor Charles Levine of Clayton, and Vice Mayor Peg Kovar of Walnut Creek.

Honorary chairman is State Sen. John A. Nejedly, chairman of the Senate Natural Resources and Wildlife Committee and well-known environmentalist who led a successful legislative campaign for expansion of Mt. Diablo State Park lands.

Public contributions started by a substantial cash gift by the Contra Costa Times as "seed money," will be used toward restoring the seared park land upon which uncounted trees, shrubs and other plant life were destroyed. Between 3,200 and 4,000 acres of park land was among the 6,000 acres that burned.

Contributions, preferably by check, may be sent to "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund," Box 5088, Walnut Creek, 94596.

With the holocaust brought under control Thursday, only preliminary estimates of the loss of trees, plant life and grasses could be made, according to Miles Standish, a park ranger.

The "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund" yesterday received the endorsement of State Director of Parks and Recreation Herbert Rhodes who said in Sacramento that funds contributed would be administered by the California State Parks Foundation, headed by William Penn Mott, in conjunction with the state Department of Parks and Recreation.

"The contributions will be used toward speeding up the restoration of the state park which attracts about 385,000 guests per year. Our goal will be to restore the park to its original beauty with identical species of plants and trees under existing 'natural park' policies of the department," Rhodes commented.

Reseeding of grasses will be done by the State Division of Forestry and the additional restorative work will be by state parks department employees, and the California Conservation Corps, according to Rhodes.

The mayors serving as co-chairmen today issued an appeal to individuals and organizations concerned with the prospects of a bleak, barren and blackened Mt. Diablo, to contribute as individuals and/or organizations.

Mayors LaPointe and Levine and Vice Mayor Kovar also said that a special trust account had been established by The Times' starter gift at the Wells Fargo Bank on North Main St., and that funds contributed to the "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund" could only be made payable to the California State Parks Foundation, a citizen group. The contributions will be turned over to the state park and recreation department and will be designated for use in restoration of the 9,000-acre park.

Lost in the blaze were countless trees and thousands of native bushes, including manzanita, buck brush, greasewood and a substantial number of species that grow nowhere else but on Mt. Diablo.

Most pine tree damage was to the Coulter pines which grow on the north slope. Another species native to the mountain are digger pines which also suffered extensive losses. Knob-cone pines, a third variety, reportedly escaped burning losses.

Rangers said that some of the manzanita lost was 60 to 80 years old and they predicted a bleak aesthetic future for the park until natural regrowth and restoration work replace the fire-damaged plant and tree life.

There was also a heavy toll in animal life during the fire, although deer wandering the north slope managed to find their way into lower level canyons where they escaped the fire.

However, their ability to forage will be severely affected by the devastation of their feeding grounds.

The State Parks Foundation reported Thursday that it had received numerous calls from concerned residents and organizations asking how they might contribute assistance in restoring Mt. Diablo and they are referring all would-be contributors to the "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund," P.O. Box 5088, Walnut Creek, 94596.

One concerned individual, Vincent Granburg of Antioch, established a fund independently at a Concord bank for similar purposes — and then went soliciting support for similar work on the mountain.

Even with generous public response to the "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund," replacement of the devastation by natural and man-aided means will be a time-consuming process, according to experts.

A coupon which makes it easier to mail contributions appears with this article and organizations wishing to conduct their own campaigns to help restore Mt. Diablo may obtain additional copies gratis from the Contra Costa Times.

Ecology unit, LARPD recall man's impact on area landscape

Although they were considered to be the ultimate in ecological awareness, early native Americans may have messed around with the environment as much as present day culprits.

Alice Tetlow proposed this startling idea Wednesday evening at the Carnegie Building in Livermore. She is a naturalist with the Livermore Area Recreation and Parks District (LARPD).

"An increasing number of historians believe that the native peoples of California have had a greater impact on the landscape of the area than has been thought in the past," Tetlow volunteered. "For example, it is now known that the native people deliberately burned Mt. Diablo and the Delta to encourage a diversity of vegetation and wildlife to live."

"That may have been good for the diets of the native peoples, but was it really as natural as we have assumed the natives to have lived?"

Many groups of native Californians lived according to the pronouncements of a "shaman" who set down ecology rules in accordance with contemporary religious myths of the people, Tetlow added.

Like a prehistoric Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Agriculture combined into one wise man, the shaman would direct each tribe on how many acorns, vegetables could be harvested or how many animals killed each year.

Later, the Spanish introduced agriculture and ranching into the Valley. Railroad development resulted in many towns being founded. And the gold rush days caused the population of San Francisco to quadruple in just a few years, Tetlow explained.

"Every group of people that has settled in the area has had an effect on the landscape," she said. "By learning from history we should be able to limit the changes we make in the present and future to those that our society desires."

Tetlow will trace the impact of man's presence in the Bay Area from prehistoric Costanoan peoples to the present day. Her program, "Man's Impact Toward a Changing Landscape" is offered Wednesday evenings at 7:30 at Livermore's Carnegie Building at Third and K Streets.

Her workshop program is co-sponsored by the Valley Ecology Center and the LARPD.

Donations to the ecology center of $1.50 per adult and 75 cents per child are asked at the door.

The 'Duzy' at CC fair thrills mob

ANTIOCH — A new carnival thrill ride, The Duzy, is making its debut at the Contra Costa County Fair in Antioch.

The fair began Aug. 3 and ends Aug. 7.

The Duzy was constructed by California Yankee Engineering in Morgan Hill, California. The ride is a new acquisition of Butler Amusements, the company operating the midway at the county fairgrounds.

The Duzy is 48-feet high and provides a "different motion" than other amusement rides, according to Earl Butler who owns Butler Amusements.

"It's a very fluid motion — very smooth. It will not nauseate riders like some of the other rides do," Butler said.

The Duzy looks and begins operation much like a normal ferris wheel. Within seconds, however, the wheel turns on its side. Seats are made to swivel so that passengers are not tipped upside down.

The Duzy was purchased for $75,000.

Salvation Army distributed food to fire-fighters

SAN FRANCISCO — With containment of the massive Mt. Diablo fire in Contra Costa County assured and mop-up operations underway, The Salvation Army, which has been on the scene since the fire broke out Monday night serving meals and beverages to firefighters, took time out to thank local businesses for their contributions of food.

Under the direction of Major Richard Anson of the Army's Oakland Men's Social Service Center, who coordinated all supplies for distribution, 5,300 sandwiches, 14,400 soft drinks, and 200 gallons of milk were served. In addition to food, The Army supplied 200 blankets, 1100 sleeping bags, 100 cartons of cigarettes, towels, and soap.

Contributions came from McDonald's, Burger King, Straw Hat Pizza, Winchell's Doughnuts, Svenhard's Swedish Bakeries, A. & W. Root Beer, and many anonymous individuals.

Hot, exhausted firefighters were particularly delighted to receive steak dinners donated by an unidentified person or company.

The Salvation Army will remain on duty serving the needs of fire-fighters until the fire is officially controlled, according to Divisional Secretary, Captain George Church.

Livermore area farm preserve requests nixed

OAKLAND — Raymond Amaral lost a bid to put 25 acres at 2711 Bess Avenue near Livermore into the Williamson Act last week.

Supervisors voted 4-0 against the request, feeling that the parcel is too close to smaller parcels and the use is not intensive enough as agriculture.

The supervisors did the same with a request of Harry Lefever and Elizabeth Mestres for 25 acres at 2447 Bess Ave., just west of the Amaral parcel.

They approved Emery and Gayle Nelson's 25 acres for the Williamson Act. The land is at the northeast corner of Westmore Road and Holmes Road, 2.5 miles south of Livermore.

The vote was 3-0 in favor, with Fred Cooper and Joseph Bort excused.

A request by Robert and Gloria Taylor for Williamson Act protection for 13 acres on South Livermore Avenue was granted conditionally, subject to their planting a vineyard on the property.

Adult nurse course open in Pleasanton

Adults interested in working in the nursing field have a chance to do just that by enrolling in the Nursing Assistant Program being given at the Pleasanton Convalescent Hospital by the Amador/Livermore Regional Occupational Program.

This course provides the opportunity to determine the depth of one's interest in this field with just one semester of study, attending ing class from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday. By satisfactorily completing the course, one can become employable in the field or continue with the study of nursing or a related field at another institution of learning.

Study includes basic nursing care, with emphasis on care of the elderly. Students will learn about the role of the nursing assistant as a part of the total health team, the many aspects of bedside care and study of the systems of the human body as well as the psychological aspects of the patient and the nursing assistant position.

To learn more about this program, call the Amador/Livermore Regional Occupational Program office at 462-1615 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

CC official Hasseltine seeks aide

PITTSBURG — A volunteer secretary is being sought by Eric Hasseltine, fifth district supervisor in Contra Costa County.

His or her duties will be to serve as secretary to an important volunteer agency in the county. The secretary would be required to take shorthand and transcribe the minutes of one or two meetings. The meetings are normally held in the morning, Hasseltine stated.

Other basic secretarial skills are required.

If you are interested, call 439-4138 or 820-3742.

Job finding effort cited

HAYWARD — The Associated Community Action Program, which serves the Valley, has received congratulations for achieving 112 per cent of its quota of job hiring success from the U.S. Department of Labor.

ACTEP was the prime sponsor of a CETA program which enrolled 1268 persons, compared to 1174 planned.

Gymnastics class slated in Livermore

Signups for gymnastics and trampoline classes offered by the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District Aug. 9 through Aug. 19 are now being taken at LARPD offices, 71 Trevarno Rd.

Gymnastics classes are held at Sonoma School Monday through Friday and include development of acrobatic skills, dexterity and body movement with work on the balance beam, bars, mats and floor exercises.

Trampoline classes are held at the Recreation Center, 8th and H Streets, Monday through Friday. Both classes are for young-sters aged 5-6, 5-6; 7-8; 9-10; 11-12; 13-13 and 13 years and up.

For further information call the LARPD, 447-7300.

Restore Diablo

While flames destroyed 6000 acres of lovely Mt. Diablo's slopes and smoke filled the East Bay sky, everyone was wondering: Is there anything I can do?

Now there is something you can do, and it could bring Diablo back to its full regal splendor in just a few years.

Our sister paper in Walnut Creek, The Contra Costa Times, has launched a drive for the "Restore Mt. Diablo Fund." The mayors of Concord and Clayton and the vice mayor of Walnut Creek all serve as co-chairpersons of that drive. State Senator John Nejedly is also involved.

The Times newspapers have planted some "seed money" of their own to launch the campaign. Now the rest is up to you.

All funds will be administered by the California State Parks Foundation, headed by William Mott. Reseeding of grasses will be done by the State Division of Forestry and other plantings will be undertaken by state park employees and the California Conservation Corps.

Want to participate? Then send your check to: Restore Mt. Diablo Fund, Box 5088, Walnut Creek, 94596; or, if you prefer, leave your contribution at our offices in Livermore or in Pleasanton and we'll forward them to the campaign committee.

Let's restore our old friend Diablo back to full health!

Tax relief, ho ho

So how's the "Saga of Property Tax Relief" doing?

When you last tuned in, you will recall the governor jousting with the legislature over who will get credit for giving home owners close to one billion dollars in tax reductions. Then we learned that the one billion dollar windfall was really part of two billions in tax overpayments that California wage earners had been socked the last year or two, due to inflation and stuff like that.

Anyhow, as we rejoin the Saga, Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post is advising the governor as to how the state will be broke in a year or two if the governor goes ahead with his plan to provide property relief AND equalize school financing AND dole out all those other welfare goodies that legislators and governors like to talk about when they are up for re-election.

There are two choices, Post advises the governor: Cut back that promised tax "refund" for property owners, or cut down on spending in such areas as health and welfare.

Tax relief?? We'll considered ourselves damned lucky if we survive the rest of this decade without a whopping tax increase, one way or another.

Redevelopment

Downtown Pleasanton is the envy of many old-town core areas for its renovation of older structures, and filling in vacant spaces with new buildings that still capture the Early-Spanish-California image. No one block in Pleasanton's core area has done a better job on that score than the south end of Main Street.

Which is why we wonder just what the city planning commission and one local realtor are trying to tell us when they talk of "South Main Street becoming completely declined." We suggest that end of old Pleasanton never looked more promising.

Vic Lund Jr. took on a couple of marginal buildings and — with nothing more than his own courage, and his own capital — converted both those structures into handsome office centers. Frank DeFillippo spruced up his Gay 90's Pizza, and then added a small office complex to complete that corner property. Across the street, Valley Bank came in with a handsome branch office and around the corner Pleasanton Civic Center is showing bright promise.

And now, in the adjoining block, Citizens Savings and Loan Association has announced plans for a major financial and retail strip. Declining? We prefer to think South Main Street has just begun to live!

Best of all, it has been private investment, largely from the local sector, which brought one end of this hundred-year-old core area to life again — without federal funding, without local subsidy and without even a city-supported parking lot!

So don't go feeling sorry for South Main Street in Pleasanton. It's an example of local initiative which needs to be duplicated, over and over.

The beef crisis

Meat prices are soaring, but the beef producer is operating at a loss. That's the plight of a business that hits residents of this Valley on two counts: as consumers and as a cattle rancher.

The price we pay for beef has shot up 17 percent in five years, from $1.11 per pound to $1.35 per pound for the average cut. But prices paid the rancher in the last 12 months came to considerably less than the cost of producing that animal. One study suggests a cattleman loses nine cents per head per day for every animal he owns.

As this trend continues, more ranchers — particularly those thousands who raise stock only as a secondary income — will get out of that unprofitable business. The fulltime rancher can hang on a while longer by mortgaging his land, but even that can only last for so long.

The result — given another year of this economic squeeze and this drought — will be too few producers, too much demand, and retail prices soaring clear out of sight.

That's a kind of sure-fire disaster we can do without. You'd have to hope an intelligent society could find a better answer.

The week in retrospect

County sexism

Now for another report from the sexist front, brought to you through the auspices of our Valley supervisor's office!

Flash! Supervisor Valerie Raymond's appointee to Alameda County's Commission on the Status of Women hopes to step-up the "battle" to rid county schools of sexism.

The person in question, reportedly a vocational counselor at Fremont's Kennedy High School, claims we here in Alameda County are continuing to drag our feet in the matter of fully complying with Title IX tenets. The latter federal order says we must not be concerned with what sex teaches any subject; that we must provide equal educational opportunities for all. Greater opportunities must also be accorded female personnel, particularly in the realm of administration.

Ms. Pat Ackley, the appointee, claims her primary reason for seeking a seat on the commission was to urge school districts to more closely observe Title IX dictates — to be sort of a Big Sister, supposedly.

All of you school districts out there who are oppressing women "and other minorities" as the old looney-liberal line goes — keeping them from advancing, not providing equal educational opportunities and (shudder!) assigning them in stereotypical fashion to certain classes (women teachers for women's P.E., etc.), beware!

Your malingering days are at an end. All those men coaching mens teams and you trustees trying to balance budgets step to the rear of the room and do your best to keep still.

But back to the problem, which also deals with insuring equal educational opportunities and more women educators in administrative roles.

Ms. Ackley will be encouraged to learn that Valley school districts are doing an excellent job in the matter of getting more girls sports teams going and providing opportunities for women to advance into administration.

In fact, it was just the other day that the Amador and Pleasanton districts appointed five new assistant principals, all women.

Shall we pause while the local NOW chapter derisively sneers at this blatant tokenism and under-the-gun reaction.

Those male teachers and coaches in the audience would be well advise to contain themselves and consider a stint as a home economics instructor next semester. And remember, the girls' softball team gets the bus tomorrow afternoon!

While Title IX and associated orders, rules, policies and laws don't specifically deal with numbers, percentages or quotas, there is at least a very strong implication in all that women, be they student or staff member, are entitled to a bigger share of the apple. Which is perfectly all-right, since I know who's been getting the worms.

But in the great socialistic tradition of "numbers," one finds that men appear to be outnumbered by women in both teaching and classified positions. For example, 478 of the 844 employees listed in the 1976-77 Amador-Pleasanton personnel directory are women. Of just classified employees in the Murray district (which includes part-time instructional aides), just 39 of 114 are men. The ratio on the teaching staff is approximately 75-25 percent female-male.

Unfortunately, trying to balance "numbers" as the liberal loonies so often attempt does not take into account such considerations as job preparation, experience and seniority.

When confronted with the law and/or facts, opt for the best stage ever devised for the oppressed and distressed — the streets. Which automatically gives one a free ticket to the all-day newspapers, 6 and 11 o'clock news (followed by a "spread" in your favorite magazines).

If this all sounds like a gentle rap at Ms. Ackley's sexist comments, it is.

And another attempt to remind those involved that when you talk about minorities you better define your terms. Women, to name one group, are most certainly not a minority in-toto nor are they in the number of school positions they hold.

Perhaps we need a County Commission on the Status of Men. Or better yet, a single commission reflecting all groups in the county with the same interests as the aforementioned panels.

Letters to the Times

Sexual choices

Editor, The Times:

An open reply to "Rusty" (Times, 7-31-77). I am not surprised you reject my authority on the causes of homosexuality. Whatever your opinion however, some things are inescapably true. The fact of human bisexuality demonstrates that your life style is an aberration. Whatever the cause, it has been your choice to indulge it. As for the charges of fear, I can only say "you bet", but it is not some sweaty palmed panting version. It is a healthy respect for the implications of moral decline. The civil rights of all of us rest on laws, but the laws have no force apart from those who make, interpret, and enforce them. Moral corruption in society causes decay in the judgement of these people. We already see this in the efforts to "re-interpret" old laws in order to bend them.

I fail to see the point in your reminder that Gays come from all walks of life (I was quite aware of that). Perhaps the editor removed the punch line. The emotional outburst about doing away with people is curious. I know of no one proposing any such action now or in the future.

The course I recommend is found in John 8:1-11 (Christ's dealings with an adulterous woman). He dealt compassionately with her, but no pretense whatever was made that her life style was an acceptable alternative, and he charged her not to continue the practice.

I consider you a valuable human being, but your sexual choices are unacceptable. G. Roger Gathers Pleasanton

Wild bus ride

Editor, The Times:

I have had to ride a school bus to summer school for the past six weeks. I have never had to ride one before and I was shocked by the driving practices of my bus driver. For example: one day we had gone over two curbs before we even reached Foothill High School. The next day, while coming out of the Foothill parking lot, we literally ran a car off of the road!

Th day after that I sat directly behind the driver, so the speedometer was clearly in my view. The bus sped 10 miles per hour faster than the 45 miles per hour speed limit. A speed of 50 miles per hour was maintained through both 30 and 25 miles per hour zones. All of this occurred on Foothill Road which is notorious for its automobile accidents.

The thought of a school bus, full of students without seatbelts, crashing, is terrifying, but very possible with this type of driving. I hope it is possible for something to be done about this before school starts again in September. Even though I won't have to ride a bus to school, I'm sincerely worried about the other students whose lives will be risked everyday by these actions.

Council collective

Writing about the "correct" use of the English language as it applies to us laboring in the press is automatically a lost cause. After all, this is not English we write, but journalese, a mixture of conversational Midwestern and Oxford snooty.

However, I am so peeved at the latest violation of English usage, I am sending off this angry missive to the world. My gripe, to wit, is the usage, now extant in two of the three Valley newspapers, of the phrase "city council" to describe local city councils. I remember the halcyon days when it was "the city council". Yes, it was an entity then, not a collective person. Now that City Council is a person, five people rolled into one, I demand to see an artistic rendering of him/her/it/them. I'm sure some cartoonist can oblige.

After all, cartoonists gave us that depiction known as "Labor", which is a fat-armed, hairy chested guy in overalls looking a little stupid and low I.Q. Cartoonists also gave us "Big Business", that older, bald-headed fellow in the smoking a vested suit, cigar and looking fat around the waist. And there was the big fella with the torso shaped like a bomb, sporting human arms and legs, with fat arms just like "Labor." Usually he was labeled "War", but sometimes "nuclear weapons."

So there's the new challenge for you cartoonists. Draw a composite symbol-person for "City Council." Be sure you make it androgynous.

FOUND the town

He came onto the American scene with all the flourish reserved for kings and presidents. But Douglas MacArthur was neither, and in that was his own personal tragedy.

The story of one of this nation's more intriguing figures is captured in "MacArthur", a movie now playing in San Francisco and in Pleasant Hill. But MacArthur, the story, proves as difficult to capture as ever was that soldier who was a Pacific island recluse for much of his adult life, but who impacted his country more than did most other men, and more than many presidents.

It was always difficult to tell which he really was ... military genius or frustrated evangelist of the right. The movie does little to help clear up this confusion.

What "MacArthur" does do is rekindle a chapter in American history that fascinated and frightened millions of Americans, in that period between Pearl Harbor and Korea, when it was as important to decide why we were fighting, as it was to determine who.

Douglas MacArthur had few doubts as to "why". It was the "communist menace" which he saw as the real enemy in the final days of World War I; it was the communists who threatened to disrupt his careful (and many thought brilliant) program for reconstruction of a post-war Japan; and it was the "communist influence in Washington" which cut away at his authority, and eventually brought the great man to the one really crushing defeat of his life.

To think now of Douglas MacArthur is to remember also Joseph McCarthy. The junior senator from Wisconsin was also a champion of the right, a "dedicated American" who saw the threat of communism at every political opportunity.

The nation would reject "McCarthyism", finally, bitterly. The nation also rejected "MacArthurism", with more tears perhaps, but with even more finality than it washed the country's hands of Tail Gunner Joe.

The story on the screen is of a General MacArthur who was flamboyant, colorful, egotistical, stubborn. It is a character well defined for us by Gregory Peck (an actor who comes by his imperialism naturally).

But it is in the jousting between MacArthur and Truman which today's viewer finds greatest fascination. Harry Truman won then. Harry Truman wins again now.

We are a nation founded on the political principle. We are a people who insist that our presidents be elected; our generals appointed. That was the distinction the poor haberdasher from Missouri had to impose upon one of the greatest military heroes of all time. The haberdasher prevailed, and the American people did not challenge his authority.

Richard Nixon tested the "American political system" in his own way, 20 years later. He saw the man as something more than the office. He had visions of power that the system never meant to be. And Richard Nixon lost.

To watch Douglas MacArthur (Gregory Peck) stride across the wide screen is to watch a comic character, given today's values, today's rejection for war. Only when the central figure tells us "I abhor war as does no other man" does he begin to relate to today's America.

The movie's producers do a commendable job in playing down the GI Joe heroics, and playing up the tragedy of U.S. troop reversals, in that first terrible year following Pearl Harbor. It is from that platform of hopelessness that Douglas MacArthur launched his own meteoric career. He was a hero, when the free world badly needed heroes.

Harry Truman was a hero too. In the careful hindsight of history, we have an opportunity to compare one against the other. Remembering how large Douglas MacArthur loomed then, it is easier now to recognize how tall the little man from Missouri stands ... in the values which this republic holds dear.

Sitting through the preview showing of "MacArthur" on Thursday evening it was interesting to observe the dispassionate participation of the invited audience in that performance. There was a light smattering of applause saluting the dramatic finale on the grounds at West Point, but scarcely enough to match the size of the military contingent which had been bussed in for this long-awaited story of the army's most controversial champion.

You get the feeling that General MacArthur belongs no more to today's army than did MacArthur the philosopher endure as the spokesman for a nation's will.

He was the great American hero a long time ago. That is where history should let him rest.

Teachers

Should teachers be granted retirement after 30 years service regardless of age? Proponents argue "yes" maintaining that under today's standards such lengthy service constitutes a "full teaching career." They also say that broadening the opportunity for retirement is necessary to make room for the overabundance of young teaching graduates seeking jobs.

The issue will come to a head soon in the Senate where AB 674, already approved by the Assembly awaits hearings before the Senate committees dealing with Public Employment and Finance.

Supported by the California Teachers Association, the measure is opposed by the Teachers Retirement System as well as taxpayer groups. The Retirement System's official opposition is both understandable and expected. Facing serious problems by reason of being underfunded some $8 billion, its objections are compelled by financial reasons and leave unanswered the philosophical and sociological questions.

Actually, ducators may now retire as early as age 55 regardless of years of service but at a reduced rate. For the pension program is geared to a retirement age of 60 which, with 30 years service, would provide half pay.

Under AB 674, authored by Assemblyman Louis Papan, retirement would be permitted even before age 55 at near full pension for those with 30 or more years service.

That of course is the problem. Both employee and employer contributions have been computed on the half pay at age 60 with 30 years service formula. Any reductions of the age requirements without overall changes in the rates of contribution can only result in the teacher pension program becoming even more underfunded that it already is.

This, ven though the present number who would instantly become eligible for early retirement is not great and is estimated to be about 2500 by the retirement fund officials.

Recognition has been given at least in part to this aspect of the problem by the bill's author. He provides that there would be some reduction from the full retirement benefits for those opting for the early retirement. He also provides that the school districts must make additional contributions to cover to some degree the added costs for those taking early leave.

Having to bear the brunt of the costs it is left to the local school districts to grant or refuse the early retirement permitted under the bill. Thus the school boards can play Santa Claus with the taxpayer's money for a favored employee or conversely play hard-nosed and refuse the same privilege to one not so favored.

Also involved in the consideration is whether or not the pensions will really be for retirement. Recent disclosures of plays engaged in by some school administrators may dim the chances of passage of the bill.

These revelations center on those school officials who, having taken early retirement, turn right about an enter into "consulting" contracts with the same districts from which they have just retired to do virtually the same work they had been doing, thus being paid twice for the one job.

Papan has promised to amend his bill by Assemblywoman Carol Hallett aims to halt such practices, most will feel that Papan's measure should carry a built in bar to double dipping just in case the Hallett bill falters along the way.

Dr. Joyce Brothers

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: My uncle is dying of cancer and I've been going to the hospital to see him every day for the past three weeks. At first I found it very difficult and visited only because I felt it would mean something to him. Now I go because I believe I'm the one who's gaining an invaluable experience. My uncle never struck me as a courageous man but I'm so impressed with his ability to handle death. In a way, I believe he's trying to teach me a great lesson. In the beginning he seemed angry about his illness but now he is almost serene. It appears that now his doctors are more angry at his condition than he. — F.P.

DEAR F.P.: The doctors may unconsciously feel that his illness and his dying are an indication of their failure. Author and psychiatrist, Dr. Russell Noyes is critical of physicians who turn away from death, leaving their patients without the counsel traditionally expected from the doctor.

I'm sure you're not only helping your uncle, but are in the process, helping yourself. Accepting the inevitability of death prepares us for living and makes us appreciate the value of each moment.

From what you've written, your uncle seems to have passed through the phase of dying where the individual struggles and resists. During this period there is often a great deal of conflict between wanting to survive and wanting to surrender. The individual is often torn between these two impulses.

According to Dr. Noyes, there are three phases of dying: the resistance, then a period where the individual reviews his life, and finally a kind of transcendence when the person experiences himself in a new manner. This may be reflected in the serenity you mention.

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I hate to be an old crank but I don't see why it's necessary for some of my neighbors to make so much noise. To me, this is pollution and there should be some way to stop it. Every morning about 6:30 some young man decides to work on his motorcycle, or maybe he's just coming home from a date, but this terrible noise awakens me. Kids around here use our streets as if they were made only for noisy motorcycles. I suppose there's nothing I can do but move. Am I neurotic, and if so, how can I cope with it. — T.P.

DEAR T.P.: I don't think you're neurotic and I believe there is something you can do. Freedom doesn't mean total disregard for others. I'm sure other neighbors who don't enjoy being awakened at 6:30 would like to limit the noise. Why don't you find out how they feel and try to take group action. Let the police in on your problem.

Unfortunately, many people, especially insecure young males, feel that noise is synonymous with sexual power. Starting their motorcycles is like flexing their muscles or exhibiting themselves sexually. The misconception that high noise levels indicate power and potency makes it extremely difficult to reason with the noise-makers. When one attempts to, it often brings out fears of castration.

Women, as well as men, tend to associate noise with power. Recently, vacuum cleaners were given to a group of women for their comments. The women repeatedly chose the loudest machines saying they did the best job. Actually, the quietest vacuum was designed to be the most efficient.

Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have a nose drip summer and winter. My doctor calls it hay fever but I don't believe it would last like this and never let up. He put me on Ornade once and that never helped much and then on Chlor-Trimeton which isn't much help. Dristan capsules help more than anything but I don't like to take them all the time.

I am 69 and have always had good health. I would like to know what you say about this — is there any cure or not. I have had it as long as I can remember. What causes it? I don't often catch colds. I do sneeze a lot.

DEAR READER — It certainly sounds like an allergy and would be called allergic rhinitis — commonly called hay fever. Such problems are seldom related to hay and do not cause a fever so that old term is very misleading but commonly understood.

While much of hay fever is seasonal, the most common being in the fall with ragweed pollen exposure, some people do have hay fever all year long. In these cases the offending allergic substance is usually house dust, animal dander or fungus spores.

The best treatment is to avoid the substance that causes allergic rhinitis. That requires finding out what substance or substances are involved.

I am sorry to tell you that you will need to take an-tihistamines continually or at least before the symptoms occur to get the best results from them. People with hay fever sometimes make a mistake by failing to take the medicines until the symptoms begin. They are far less effective when taken this way.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had surgery for ulcers three years ago and 85 per cent of my stomach was taken out. My wife had a hysterectomy operation over a year ago. She says that when we breathe she can smell the odor of blood on us. I keep telling her that it's not possible. Would you please give me an answer on this subject to settle this?

DEAR READER — I doubt any answer will settle anything but I can assure you your wife's impression that she can smell blood is not because she really does. It is more than likely fixed in her mind.

Ultimately we smell, hear and see because of various brain cells that receive signals. For some reason your wife has developed a sensation of smelling blood but it has nothing to do physically with either operation. I think this is a psychological reaction and your wife might benefit from some professional counseling. Her reaction is really a symptom of a conversion reaction which means that your wife may have resolved some psychological conflict or anxiety by smelling blood.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Play second fiddle to your mate today in situations where she seems to opt for the lead. It will help to keep the peace.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Do your waistline a favor. Push yourself away from the table today. Get involved in something out of doors and you'll appreciate the results. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Rx for a fun day today: associate with those who think and feel young. You'll find their exuberance to be infectious.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Take care of family responsibilities before you let your hair down and have fun today. Otherwise, you really won't enjoy yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Your way of addressing yourself to others puts them totally at ease today. That you care about their problems is a settling influence.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It's fortunate that you view things very calmly today. This is good for those around you. Your cool is a stabilizing factor.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Though you won't seek it, the mantle of leadership falls on your shoulders today. It's up to you to see that things aren't stalled on dead center.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Pursue quiet activities today, since they'll afford you greater pleasure than strenuous pastimes.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Limit your social activities today to friends with whom you can be yourself. You'll be uncomfortable trying to come on with unfamiliar people.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Oswald: "The flatter your distribution, the less valuable your hand. There just aren't enough prospects for your small cards."

Jim: "Thus, we recommend that with 4-3-3 distribution you should not raise your partner's notrump opening with eight points. If he has a minimum 16 and passes you will have put him in a contract that is likely not to make; if he has 18 or a good 17 he will bid game and while he may bring it home some of the time he will be set often enough so that he will not appreciate your raise."

Oswald: "Today's hand is a good example. South has a full 18 points and continues to three notrump after his partner's raise. He ducks one spade, wins the second one in dummy and decides to go after clubs. East ducks the first club and South takes his queen. Back to dummy with the queen of diamonds for a second club lead to the king. Next comes the lead of a third club. East cashes the ace and jack and eventually the defense collects one more spade and the ace of hearts for down one."

Bob Doyle shows how close the 6,042-acre fire came to his front doorstep. His ranch house is partially visible across the road from the burned area.

Donner Canyon was his life until fire ravaged Diablo

By TOM MARTENS
Times Staff Writer

DONNER CANYON — "I lost the only things I loved. I lost the mountain. I lost the canyon," said Bob Doyle.

The 25-year-old naturalist lived in the state-owned Hetherington Ranch house in this canyon that juts out of Mt. Diablo State Park toward Clayton.

"Before the fire, cats — big bobcats — came down to my spring to drink water. Everything...birds, hawks...an incredible amount of wildlife watered at my place."

Firefighters were able to save the ranch house, but Doyle's water tower and spring water trough were lost.

The pipe that connected the spring to the tower was mangled by bulldozers.

But in these moments of reflection after the fire, Doyle was more concerned about "his" canyon.

"It was a perfect ecosystem," he said. "There were predator animals and smaller wildlife all in balance."

"I could sit in the cabin at night and listen to the mountain lions screaming through the canyons."

Doyle is perhaps one of the men who best knows the northern slopes of Mt. Diablo where the fire started early Monday evening.

A biology student on leave from San Francisco State University, Doyle has hiked the mountain for four years. He had lived in the Hetherington cabin for about a year and a half.

As a part-time worker for the East Bay Municipal Parks District, he headed a team that charted a trail map of Mt. Diablo's narrow, often steep canyons and flat meadows.

And he was the first person to arrive at the fire Monday night.

"I was coming back from working on the mountain," Doyle said. "And I heard on my truck radio that a fire had started on the north side of the mountain."

So he headed his two-wheel-drive pickup in that direction.

When he arrived — about 6:30 p.m. Monday — the pines were ablaze, with no one around to fight the fire.

He got out of the area, heading down the trail toward Clayton.

"It was then that I ran into a fireman from the Consolidated Fire Department," he said, "who told me he didn't know where in the hell he was." As the men talked among the gray-needled coulter pines, the fire edged above them toward the even more heavily wooded Back Canyon.

Doyle gave the firemen his recently drawn trail map, one of the few updated maps in the area.

He said the fire started in the most densely wooded portion of the mountain.

"I told the firemen to try to stop the fire before Back Canyon or the mountain would be lost," Doyle said.

"But the fire retardant planes couldn't see the Back Canyon area because of the smoke," he said.

The fire raced through that canyon unchecked. And Doyle raced to save his house.

He loaded furniture and a baby fox into his truck about 8:30 p.m. Monday, Doyle said, as the fire approached to about one-quarter mile.

"I was all loaded," he said, "but I didn't want to leave the cabin to the fire."

As the fire came within 300 yards, a fire fighting bulldozer came rumbling over a ridge toward the house.

"There was a bulldozer driver and a guide," Doyle said. "And they just came straight toward me, plowing big oak trees down in front of them."

They plowed a fire break around the house and set back fires, which saved the structure. Soon after, nine fire trucks arrived down the dirt road and firemen persuaded Doyle to leave.

"I went to the clearing and sat and watched," he said.

The green wooden cabin, built in the early 1940s and lit by propane power lanterns, was the home of a horticulturalist named Hetherington from 1953 to 1973, when the state bought it for the park.

The fire soon looked like a volcano, with the digger pines burning a bright orange and the chaparral burning ruby red.

At 4 a.m. Tuesday, Doyle drove to the Regency Woods area of Clayton, parked his truck, slumped in the seat and fell asleep.

"I returned to the cabin at 9 a.m. Tuesday," Doyle said. "And Lord it was still there."

He stayed with a firefighter all Tuesday night. Doyle said the fire lit the barn three times during the night, but it was put out each time with a fire truck at the cabin.

As firefighters pulled out Thursday, Doyle returned to the blackened canyon to survey the damage and reflect on the fire.

Doyle plans to continue living at the cabin.

"First I have to figure out some way to bring the spring back to life," he said. "Or truck in water for drinking and for the animals when they return."

But the future is still questionable.

State Bar seeks juvenile trial rights

Leshner News Bureau

MARTINEZ — Juveniles don't have a right to jury trials. The issue has been before the state supreme court several times and each time that position has been affirmed.

And Dist. Atty. William O'Malley agrees.

However, the board of governors of the State Bar Association has recommended that they be given jury trials.

Current law denies the right of jury trials to juveniles, except those 16 and 17-year-olds certified to stand trial as adults.

Arguing that juveniles should have jury trials was Peter Bull, of the bar's juvenile justice committee.

He said it would not burden the criminal justice system, saying that at least 14 states presently afford juveniles the right to trial by jury. Yet in those 14 states only 2 per cent of the juvenile defendants opt for juries.

Bull said that the juvenile justice system has evolved over the last 15 years from a non-adversary to an adversary system.

Opponents of Bull's proposal warned that the youths might receive unfair trials in small towns, adding that a youth might get off on a technicality thinking he's beaten the system, only to end up in court again.

East Bay Athletic League players chosen to the Alameda County All-Star football squad posing here with Cerebral Palsy mascot Randy Miller of Pleasanton, are Dublin's Robert Klein; Tim Palmer of Livermore; Foothill's Mike Colvin; and Vance Rushing and Larry Burke from Granada.

Alameda-Contra Costa tilt East Bay five primed

HAYWARD — Posing for pictures and poking around for a little plain fun, the Alameda County All-Star football squad gathered yesterday at California State University's football field here.

While the twice-a-day workouts won't begin until Thursday for the contest scheduled against Contra Costa County's All-Stars August 20 at Eells Stadium in Antioch, the stars had physical examinations at the campus and later stepped into their uniforms for the first time.

From the East Bay Athletic League, five players were chosen to compete on the squad.

Running back Vance Rushing and linebacker Larry Burke from Granada made the team, while Livermore defensive end Tim Palmer, Dublin's tackle/nose-guard Robert Klein and linebacker Mike Colvin from Foothill round out the local players.

For many of the All-Stars, the game will be a time for getting in shape for the upcoming season at their respective college, while for others the contest is taken very seriously.

"You've got to take it seriously," says Klein, who at 6-1, 210 was a second team All-East Bay pick.

"I had to give up a job at $7 an hour for this game," tells Burke, who is planning on playing football at UC - Davis this fall.

Rushing is hoping the game will let scouts from Brigham Young University, where Vance is enrolled for the fall, get a better look at a runner who gained 1275 yards and scored 21 touchdowns for Granada last season. Rushing is not on scholarship to BYU.

While Klein has decided to red-shirt a year and go to work, Palmer and Colvin are both eyeing starting jobs at Chabot College in Hayward.

"We're playing for the first time together, and that's good," says Colvin. Palmer also sees the game as an opportunity to get to know some of the players who used to be enemies in high school.

Alameda quarterback Mike Ricupito and Palmer, a defensive end, met head-to-head a few times in last year's North Coast Southern Section final against Washington. The Huskies, with Ricupito calling the shots, beat the Cowboys handily.

Cowan, Arnaudon on CC

PLEASANT HILL — Dave Cowan and John Arnaudon went both ways in high school but they freely admit they prefer to make it on offense.

"It's just more exciting," said Arnaudon at the weigh-ins for the Contra Costa All-Star football team at Diablo Valley College here yesterday. "I like to catch the ball."

Arnaudon played both defensive back and wide receiver for San Ramon High School. Cowan made the All-East Bay Athletic League team for Monte Vista High as a wide receiver.

They'll both get plenty of chances to catch the ball against Alameda when the all-star battle August 20 at Eells Stadium in Antioch.

Contra Costa has two of the finest quarterbacks in the Bay Area in Harley Miller of Campbell and Joe Aliotti of Pittsburg.

That's where we might have an advantage over them," said Arnaudon. Both Miller and Aliotti are really good passers.

Cowan is going to the University of Idaho and Arnaudon is headed for Santa Rosa Junior College.

"I like the program and the coaches at Idaho," commented Cowan. "Also, it's a small college town with a lot of interest in the school. It's also close to Washington State so there are a lot of college students around the area."

"We're used to seeing these guys on the other side of the line, but now we're playing together," adds Burke.

All five players agree the game will have more pressure to cope with than in high school days. "It's higher competition," says Burke, "and we have to prove ourselves to the scouts."

—by Brian Martin

Arnaudon chose Santa Rosa because of its reputation as one of the powers of the Camino Norte Conference. He, too, likes the attitude of the coaches.

Both players have been keeping active during the off-season, lifting weights and running a lot.

"This game will be a good conditioner for football at Idaho," admitted Cowan. I weigh 195 pounds now but I want to get up to about 210 or 215 in college.

Cowan could be a major threat for Contra Costa against the Alameda squad. With his size (he's 6-4) it's almost impossible to cover him one-on-one.

He moved to Danville with his family from the Chicago area before his senior season.

How does football in Chicago compare with that in the valley?

"It's about the same," he remarked. "There might be a little bit more interest back there because there isn't as much to do. The average high school team has from 40 to 50 players on its squad."

While there is no major star football game in the Chicago area they have an advanced playoff schedule during the regular season.

"The strongest teams are on the north shore," Cowan went on. "They're mostly 5-A (big school) teams."

Contra Costa leads the series 7-4, but the teams have split the last six games. By Gary Brown

Ex-Bay Area coach speaks

Ralston high on AFC

"Seven AFC teams could have beaten Minnesota in this year's Super Bowl," former Denver Bronco and Stanford University head football coach John Ralston declared last night before a group of high school coaches at the American Bankers Coaches clinic at the Sheraton Inn in Concord.

Ralston was the featured speaker at the three-day clinic, designed to help coaches find means of gaining supplementary incomes.

"The AFC is much tougher, twice as tough, as the NFC," claimed Ralston, who was forced to resign by the Broncos in February.

"The NFC is not as progressive as the AFC," he continued. "The AFC started the three-man line and has better quarterbacks."

"During the preseason last year, we (Denver) beat Dallas, St. Louis, and Minnesota, three good NFC teams," he said proudly. "We beat the Vikings handily in the last preseason game and both teams were really playing."

Ralston said Oakland, New England, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Denver could have topped Minnesota on Super Bowl Sunday. The Raiders did quite easily, 32-14.

The former Stanford coach, who led the Indians (now Cardinals) to back-to-back Rose Bowl victories in 1971 and 1972, began his coaching career 26 years ago at Mt. Diablo High School.

"I was the backfield coach," he remarked before starting his speech. "I was there for the 1951 and 1952 seasons. Rod Franz was the head coach. We had a lot of fun."

The Red Devils finished 6-2 the first year and went 8-0 the second year.

"We lost to Pittsburg and Acalanes, which was kind of a surprise," recalled Ralston, now a color commentator for the Seattle Seahawks. "The second year we should have won every game but against Pitt blew a 19-0 lead late in the third quarter.

"We started substituting players once we had the big lead and lost our momentum," he muttered. "We should have stayed with our starters."

Ralston remembers the then Contra Costa County Athletic League as a tough football conference.

"There were seven schools," he said. "There was Alhambra, Albany, Antioch, Acalanes, Mt. Diablo, Pittsburg, and John Swett." The University of California (Berkeley) graduate left Mt. Diablo in 1952 to take a head coaching job at San Lorenzo High School in Alameda County.

From there he went to his college alma mater as an assistant, where he coached the wide receivers. He then became head football coach at Utah State University before accepting the same position at Stanford.

In 1972 he left the Farm for Denver, where he spent the next five years.

Last season he led the Broncos to their best season ever, but his 9-5 record apparently wasn't good enough for team owner General Manager Fred Gerhke.

"Of course I resigned under pressure," he snapped. "I would never quit anything."

It was Ralston's own promise that led to his downfall.

"I said we would make the playoffs in five years," he shrugged. "We ended up with winning football, led the league in season ticket sales (73,000) and had the largest season ticket waiting list (10,000) in the league, but we failed to make the playoffs."

But Ralston said he has no regrets and blames only himself for his troubles.

"Phipps decided to split the coaching and general manager's job," explained Ralston, who held both positions until shortly before he resigned. "I had my choice and took the coaching job."

Gerhke, who was my assistant general manager, wanted his own coach when he was made general manager so I resigned," he stated.

"It's part of the job, but a couple of staff members should have been replaced a couple of years ago. I didn't do it," he added.

Ralston anxiously admits he wants another head coaching job in the NFL. In fact, he says he won't return to the college ranks.

"I've enjoyed all my jobs," he commented. "But I want to stay in professional football. I've rejected two college offers."

During his speech Ralston said the finest coaching is done in pro football.

"That's because you're doing it all the time," he claimed. "In college you're also recruiting and teaching." The former coach believes recruiting is nothing more than sales.

"And stealing one from McKay (former USC football coach John McKay) now and then is like winning a football game," he remarked.

"Although that's not a good way to make friends with McKay," he added, possibly referring to their longstanding and often heated rivalry.

Penske says no go

TALLADEGA, Ala. —

Every top driver in Grand National stock car racing is on hand for Sunday's $200,000 Talladega 500, except defending champion Dave Marcis. And Marcis' car owner, Roger Penske, says a cheating scandal that hit the Alabama International Motor Speedway's garage area Wednesday is a prime reason why his team is not competing this weekend.

Several of the top teams, including defending Grand National champion Cale Yarborough, front-row starter Donnie Allison, previous Talladega winners Darrell Waltrip and Buddy Baker, and top rookie qualifier Sam Sommers, were caught with ingenious expanding gas tanks in their cars.

"It seems like this sort of this is happening much too often in NASCAR racing. Too often for us," said Penske, whose cars haven't won a Grand National race since the 1975 Southern 500. "Every time something like this comes up, somebody says, 'well, you've got to cheat to win in NASCAR.'"

"We won't cheat; we can't cheat. All of our contracts with sponsors would be cancelled immediately if we were every caught cheating."

Penske's car was fined $9,100 in its 1974 victory at Ontario, Calif., because NASCAR inspectors claimed it had an illegal engine.

"It was a very gray area in the rule book; we still believe we were within limits," said a Penske crew member. "But we had hell to pay with our sponsors. Since then we've avoided even the gray areas."

"It was a brand new car that race," Penske explained in a telephone interview from his Lodi, N.J., diesel truck operation. "The NASCAR officials inspected every inch of it before the car ever went out on the track. They filled the gas tank themselves, and then sealed it."

Since the car was not among the top finishers, Penske was not obligated to submit it for additional inspection. NASCAR officials were especially curious why the car was able to go 112 miles on the same tank of gas while 100 miles is usually considered quite a feat with a 22-gallon tank, and about four miles-per-gallon fuel economy.

After an official persisted, Penske finally said something to the effect that he would put up $15,000 that the car was legal, if the official would also put up $15,000. If the car was found to be illegal, Penske said he would gladly forfeit the $15,000 as a fine. If it was legal, well, Penske would collect.

The line of reasoning apparently satisfied the official who smiled and walked away.

Ricky's big chance

BOSTON — Ricky Williams, the Boston Red Sox' unofficial mascot during the 1967 pennant charge, is set to try his hand at pro baseball, but he's bucking baseball odds. Few sons of former players go on to make it big in the major leagues.

Ricky, now 21 and a 6-foot-1 left-handed pitcher, is remembered by Boston fans as the little kid wearing a miniature uniform with his father's number 23. Dad was Dick Williams, who led the Red Sox to the American League pennant as a rookie manager. After three years playing under former major league star and manager Eddie Stanky at South Alabama, Ricky elected to abandon his collegiate career this week, signing a pro contract with the Montreal Expos, now managed by his father.

Although born into baseball and around the game his entire life, Ricky signed without fanfare. By-passed in the draft, he was a free agent. Now he's going to start at the bottom, with Sarasota in the Florida rookie league.

As many other sons of major league players have learned, it's a long tough road to the big time, particularly to stardom. Scores of offspring have been disappointed.

Young Williams appears to have all the tools and knowledge as he embarks on a pro career. He has been around baseball teams and players since before he could walk. His dad played 13 major league seasons, starting with the old Brooklyn Dodgers in 1951 and finishing with the Red Sox in 1964, before turning to managing. However, despite all the knowledge picked up from dad and others, Ricky is going to have to do it himself. The only thing that will count from now on is what he does out there on the mound, a spot that became awfully lonely at times. He can expect plenty of pressure.

Only this year young Eddie Ford, son of Hall of Famer Whitey, packed it in. An outstanding shortstop prospect when signed by Boston, young Ford walked out on the Red Sox' farm system this year.

Tommy Zimmer, son of Boston manager Don, and Tim Murtaugh, son of late Pittsburgh manager Danny, quit playing as very young men to concentrate on managerial careers. Both are working their way up in the minors.

However, some sons of old players have had little trouble making the big time. They include Buddy Bell, Mike Hegan, Roy Smalley, Bob Boone, Tom Tresh, Dick and Dave Sisler, Ross Grimsley and Joe Coleman.

At times, a former star can be very disappointed when his son elects to forego baseball after many years of training. Luis Aparicio, who played for nearly 20 years after his dad became a legendary figure in Venezuela, felt sure Luis III was headed for the majors when only 15.

Maravich near $700,000

NEW ORLEANS — Basketball star Pete Maravich, who says the money really doesn't mean much to him, is reportedly near agreement on a contract that would make him the highest-paid athlete in professional sports.

Sources said the New Orleans Jazz is offering the National Basketball Association's scoring leader a five-year contract paying more than $700,000 a year.

However, a Jazz spokesman said negotiations with Maravich were not finished and that nothing had been signed.

"What we have agreed to were the dollars, but there are eight parts Maravich's attorneys are asking and the whole thing could still fall through," the spokesman said.

"But I'd say about 60 per cent of the problems have been worked out."

Swim duo honored

Nine year-old Julie Halaz, who swam five "A" times at a recent "B" meet, and Mike Berin, a 14 year-old "AA" time-achieving swimmer in the 500 free, were named Swimmers of the Month by the Livermore AquaCowboys.

Local golf

PLEASANTON FAIRWAYS Ladies Group Odd Holes:
First flight — Joan Crall, Coral Renick.
Second flight — Juanita Warner, Jane Sernach.
Third flight — Barbara Hiehle, Jessie Swanson.

Belzer leads DV to championship

Barbara Belzer defeated number one singles player Kim Carlson, 6-1, 6-0, to lead Del Valle past Stanislaus 9-0 in 14 & Under Wightman Cup action in Livermore Thursday.

The local club will advance to the Northern California playoffs next Friday, completing the year with a perfect 6-0 record.

In completing the whitewash over Stanislaus, Gina Boggini beat Kirsten Edling 6-1, 6-1, while teammate Linda Dean topped Kelly Duncan, 6-0, 6-0.

Joan Belzer took a straight sets, 6-0, 6-0 win over Cheryl Davis, while Sherry Eaton stopped Cheri Porter 6-3, 6-0 and Cathy Eaton downed Tricia Earl, 6-0, 6-0.

The doubles team of Belzer and Boggini defeated Carlson and Edling 6-2, 6-3, while Dean and Belzer whipped Duncan and Kirsten Edling 6-1, 6-3.

Ginny Fraser and Danette Loveland won the final doubles match with a 6-4, 7-5 verdict over Davis and Porter.

Raiders host Houston tomorrow

OAKLAND — The Oakland Raiders begin defense of their World Championship of professional football with their pre-season opening game against the Central Division Houston Oilers tomorrow night at 8 p.m. at the Oakland Coliseum.

It will be the first pre-season meeting between the Oilers and Raiders since 1967. During the American Football League years, the teams met four times in exhibition play and split.

In league play since the inception of the AFL in 1960, Houston and Oakland have played 23 times and the Raiders lead the series, 15-8. The teams last met Sept. 26, 1976 in the Astro-dome with two Raider goal line stands and a pair of Mike Rae to Cliff Branch touchdown passes giving Oakland a 14-13 win.

The Oilers, coached by colorful Bum Phillips, enter the 1977 pre-season seeking to regain the form that carried them to a 10-4 record in 1975 in the tough Central Division of the AFC before injuries and close defeats tumbled them from contention last season.

The Houston offense is led by former University of Santa Clara star quarterback Dan Pastorini, now beginning his seventh season in the NFL. In 1976 Pastorini completed 54 per cent of his passes (167 of 309) for 1795 yards and 10 touchdowns while being intercepted only 10 times.

Sixteen-year veteran John Hadl, no stranger to Raider fans, provides depth behind Pastorini.

Houston has top wide receiver targets in veterans Ken Burrough and Billy "White Shoes" Johnson, who caught 98 passes between them in 1976. Burrough finished fifth in receiving in the AFC last season with 51 catches (932 yards, seven touchdowns).

Mike Barber, the Oilers number one draft choice a year ago out of Louisiana Tech will open at tight end. Though 6-3, 235 lbs., Barber has wide receiver speed and maneuverability.

Big rookies Rob Carpenter (6-1, 214) from Miami of Ohio, and Tim Wilson (6-3, 220) from Maryland have been running in the first backfield. Veterans Ronnie Coleman, Don Hardeman and Joe Dawkins should also see service against the Raiders.

Three veterans and a pair of top rookies make up the Oiler offensive line. First round draft choice Morris Towns (6-4, 275)

Phillips tabs his 3-4 defense as "the best in pro football against the run" and with 50 quarterback sacks, the Oiler D is highly regarded against the pass as well. Up front Houston features 10-year pros Elvin Beathia at right end and Curley Culp at middle guard along with pro sophomore Al Burton at left end.

The game will be broadcast live over KGO-radio 810 and on the Raider network throughout California, Nevada, Arizona, Alaska and Hawaii and will be telecast over KRON-TV 4 on a tape-delay basis at 11:30 p.m.

Warriors face LA right away

OAKLAND — The home court advantage told the tale when the Golden State Warriors fell to the Los Angeles Lakers in the second round of the National Basketball Association play-offs this spring.

But when they open the pre-season Oct. 1, neither team will have that edge as the contest will be played in Reno, Nevada. It will be one of seven exhibition games for the Warriors and their first without and against Jamall Wilkes, the expatriate forward no with the Lakers.

Golden State will play only twice in the Oakland Coliseum Arena, Oct. 12 against Kansas City and Oct. 15 against Portland in the second game of a double header which will feature Los Angeles and Seattle in the first contest.

The Warriors open their regular season on Oct. 18 in Phoenix before returning to the Coliseum the next night to face Seattle in the home opener.

The full exhibition schedule is as follows: Oct. 1, vs. Los Angeles at Reno; Oct. 7, vs. Portland at Seattle; Oct. 8, vs. Seattle at Portland; Oct. 9, vs. Kansas City at Omaha; Oct. 10, vs. Kansas City at Oakland; Oct. 14, vs. Seattle at Los Angeles; Oct. 15, vs. Portland at Oakland.

Baseliners, DV win JDC berths

The Pleasanton Baseliners dropped the Pleasanton Aces for the second straight time Thursday to win an under-12 Junior Davis Cup district play-off and move on to the Northern California Tennis Association play-offs Aug. 18 at San Jose State University.

Del Valle Tennis Club advanced its under-15 team to the same event as Alameda County champs with a 9-0 whitewashing of Pleasanton's A team.

Todd Trimble, Doug Ryan, Sam Gilbert and Tim Moore won singles matches for the 'Liners while Trimble teamed with Vince Palolini and Ryan with Gilbert to notch the doubles victories that clinched the match.

Brian Warman, Jim Nash and the doubles team of Conrad Chun and Scott Gottesman were victorious for the Aces.

Del Valle's awesome win, in which they held a 117-50 edge in games won, featured singles triumphs by Leno Neri, Todd Madrid, Mike Mitchell, Andy West, Francis Neri and Jim Buranis. Darryl Butman aided the sweep of the doubles matches.

12 and under
Baseliners 6, Aces 3

Singles — Todd Trimble, B. d. Steve Carter, 7-6, 6-2; Brian Warman, A. d. Vince Palolini, 6-3, 6-1; Doug Ryan, B. d. Ken Barker, 2-6, 6-1, 6-3; Sam Gilbert, B. d. Jurgen Ruttkie, 6-3, 6-1; Tim Moore, B. d. David Irish, 6-2, 6-2; Jim Nash, A. d. David Hollister, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2.

Doubles — Trimble and Palolini, B. d. Carter and Warman, 7-5, 2-6, 7-6; Ryan and Gilbert, B. d. Barker and Ruttkie, 7-6, 6-1; Conrad Chun and Scott Gottesman, A. d. Chris Smith and Andy Gottesman, 2-6, 7-6, 6-3.

Late rally trees Monks

Singles by Linda Midtun and Cheryl Howe in the bottom of the seventh inning gave American Pools an 11-10 win over Ron Monk's Insurance in Livermore Area Recreation and Park District women's 'C' softball Thursday.

Barb Benjamin singled for the Pools while Jill Suico had a hit, Midtun rapped a trio of one-baggers, Ann Cobal singled, Howe homered and singled and Brenda Hill singled.

For the losers, Betty Hunt tripled and singled, Kathy Potter singled twice, Monica Rochin doubled and singled, Betty Griffith doubled, Virginia Franks singled and Chrys Castro singled.

Mutual Service Insurance came alive in the late innings to defeat the SRD's, 7-4.

Monique Hickert singled for the winners while Marlene Gonzaga singled, Barbara Correa singled twice, Diana Word tripled, Elizabeth Farfan tripled and singled twice and Jessica Wasson doubled.

Corin Hanson singled for the losers while Sandi Lum singled, Brenda Lopez singled, Peggy Kerr singled twice and Sandi Chrisman singled.

LLL set off its own kind of neutron bomb under The Lounge, leaving nothing but the furniture in a 22-4 stomping.

Doris Watts singled three times and doubled for the Lab while Sue King doubled twice and tripled, Estella Salinas singled and tripled, Brenda McArthur singled, Linda Feil singled, Corie Granville singled and Carol Perry singled.

For the Lounge, which suited up only nine players, Lou Eastman singled twice, Sue Mackae singled and Jerry Kone doubled.

Brokers triumph

Mel Pape and Chuck McCoy, who cracked three doubles, each had four hits as Broker's Realty dumped the Player's Lounge in Dublin Softball Association play-off action last week.

The win puts the Brokers in a two-out-of-three game series with Round Table to determine which will meet the winner of the Tucknott-Fubar's set for the championship beginning Aug. 16. Ellis Blount, Rick Moitoza, Jim Wright and Tom Miller also were instrumental for the Broker's while Lee Perrigo, Bill Glushenka, Art Marty and Jerry Hewitt did well for the losers.

Ex-A Giusti bought

CHICAGO — Veteran relief pitcher Dave Giusti was purchased Friday by the Chicago Cubs from the Oakland

A's for straight cash. Giusti, 37, had a 3-3 record with a 2.98 earned run average. He spent much of his career in the National League before going to the A's earlier this season.

The Cubs will not have to send anyone down to make room for Giusti, since they placed relief ace Bruce Sutter on the 21-day disabled list effective last Tuesday.

Rugged search

The Tri-Valley Rugby team is still searching for interested players between the ages of 18 and 40.

The club will play in the Northern California Rugby Union and will be practicing every Thursday this month at May Nissen Park in Livermore.

Further information is available from team organizer Rich Fletcher at 447-2337.

up in the league, plowed headlong into his huge opponent and drew a flag from referee Bradshaw.

"What for?" asked the 140-pound youth, "Unnecessary roughness?" "No," Bradshaw, a long-time baseball umpire and retired football/basketball ref, deadpanned, "Stupidity."

Yet, despite the presence of players who'd had a cup of coffee with teams like the Rams, Vikings, 49ers and Dolphins, Bradshaw says, "We weren't out there with Charlots, contact was minimal. Big guys could play if they were fast, but they couldn't use their size. Agility was stressed."

Yet, despite the demphasize of football's wham-bam-get-outa-the-way-Sam style, representatives of the Livermore league won eight of the ten East Bay-wide SANCRA tournaments they played in. "People believed ours was a good league to play in because of the maturity of the players," Bradshaw says.

With the usual week-after-Labor Day opener a month away, the league, however, is 99 44/100 per cent dead.

Their have been efforts to move the league to another jurisdiction in the valley and half-hearted searches for other sponsors. Both have been, thus far, fruitless.

Veteran players have cast a longing glance at the Dublin Sports Grounds, but the Valley Community Services District, though apparently not overly concerned with insurance, can't let them have it.

"We have already committed every available facility to soccer for every minute of the fall season," said VCS spokesman Brian May, a former flag football player. "We also have a rule that 80 per cent of all users must live within the boundaries of the VCS."

For post graduate football players, a classic fourth down and 56 yards to go situation. And they can't punt.

Normandy Bay in upset win

SAI. MATEO — Normandy Bay, a horse with a winning habit, dashed by the favored Fiveup Player in the stretch to score a going away four-length $25.40 upset triumph in the $25,000 added San MATEAN Handicap yesterday at Bay Meadows.

A crowd of 14,074 was on hand for the final day of the San Mateo County Fair meeting and they sent Five Up Player off the three to five favorite in the field of seven for the Getaway Day headliner.

Time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1.42, by far the fastest clocking of the two-week meeting for the distance, and Normandy Bay paid $5.60 to place and $3.80 to show, in addition to his whopping winning price.

The victory was worth $15,550 out of the gross purse of $26,800 to the owners of Normandy Bay and it boosted the horse's earnings for the year to $48,695.

Great Western race at GGF

ALBANY — The $50,000 Great Western Pace, highlight of the 23-day harness meet at Golden Gate Fields and the top purse ever offered for a harness race in Northern California, is Sunday's feature at the Albany racecourse.

The Mar Aubin trained entry of Mi Marzo Amigo and Henry's Dream N. have been installed as morning line choice at 8-5, and will start from the no. 1 and 2 post positions.

Trainer John McGregor also will start an entry, Atawave and Bye Bye Viehover, and they are tabbed at 2-1.

B.C. King, the fine three year old from the Bobby Williams Stable has drawn the outside post in the nine-horse field. B.C. King has a lifetime record of 15 wins in 22 starts, and has never been worse than third in his career.

Rounding out the field are the Battler, Dakota Star, Elite Tip, and Rusy Orphan.

The $50,000 Great Western Race is carded as the seventh race on the matinee card, and there will be $5 exacta wagering in addition to win, place and show betting. Post time is 1:30 p.m.

Saturday nights $2 daily double on no. 1 Bold Bidder ($7.40) in the first race and no. 9 Mr. Nash ($2.80) in the second paid $16.20.

Air conditioners that solve those window problems

That new home you're buying is beautiful. You plan to use room air conditioners to cool down summer heat, and you have two units from your previous home.

But neither unit will fit into the crank-out casement window in the sewing room. There isn't a room air conditioner to fit it...or is there?

Yes, there is. Special windows no longer pose an air conditioner installation problem. There's a Whirlpool model that fits in either horizontal sliding, crank-out casement (shown) or standard casement windows.

And installing them is easy. For casement windows, remove the pane of glass from the window you've chosen. For sliding windows, just slide the window to the left or right, depending upon the side you've chosen for installation. A mounting frame and translucent panel fills in the gaps.

Specialty models don't have to be "small" on features... they include many features usually found on popular-selling conventional units. Two fan speeds, air direction and air changer controls, and optional energy-saving settings are features that add to your comfort and help you save money, too.

They are "big" on features, and "big" on looks. Handsome simulated American oak woodgrain fronts accent windows and room decor beautifully.

You don't have to hesitate when confronted by a "special" window—sliding, or casement. Cool off your hot problems with a Whirlpool room air conditioner—special models to fit your special needs.

No boom or bust says NAR

Washington, D.C. — "No news is good news" on the housing front, reports the National Association of Realtors in its monthly real estate status report.

"There are no major cross currents working to push housing markets to the extreme of boom and bust," said association executive vice president H. Jackson Pontius, "with the result that real estate activity continues to move along a steady growth path. The difficult part in today's analysis is waiting for any developments which will signal a departure from the maintainable growth now being experienced."

The report, prepared by the realtors' Department of Economics and Research, cautions against any tendency to over-analyze monthly statistical shifts and to read more into monthly reports than actually is there.

For most series of data, it is necessary to analyze a few months' change to reveal significant trends, the report says, and there is no reason now to alter the association's reading of a healthy housing market.

Sales activity in the existing (resale) single-family home market continues at a stable but high rate, according to the report. In June, the seasonally adjusted annual sales rate was between 3,350,000 and 3,450,000 homes.

This is slightly below the May rate of 3,450,000, the report says, attributable mainly to the slackening pace of resale activity in the Western region.

A slowdown in the West also accounts for a moderate dip in the sale of new homes, according to the report. On a seasonally adjusted annual rate basis, 720,000 new single-family homes were sold in May — 3.5 per cent below the April rate, but a solid 30.7 per cent above the May 1976 level.

New housing starts nationally continued at a lively pace, the report says, with only slight drops in June from the May level. Overall, 1,833,000 new units were started on an annualized basis, an increase of 22.7 per cent over the June 1976 rate and 71.8 over that of June 1975.

B1 bomb out

Aerospace layoff no impact

SACRAMENTO — California's economic outlook is so strong that the layoffs of 10,000 Southern California aerospace workers won't have a significant impact, a state report said.

The bimonthly "California Economic Indicator" summary by the state Department of Finance said the layoffs caused by the B1 Bomber cancellation could reduce total personal income for the current year by $200 million.

"Considering the underlying strength of the California economy, however, the loss will not significantly change the basic outlook," said the mid-year report, issued Friday.

It said personal income now is expected to reach $172.4 billion in 1977. That 11.6 per cent increase over last year is evidence of the strong economy, the report said.

The 1978 forecast — "also seen as a year of healthy growth" — should bring an additional 10.1 per cent gain for $189.95 billion in personal income, the report said.

The report was done before the June unemployment figures were released.

earlier this week that showed the state rate at 6.9 per cent, lowest in more than three years.

Much of the employment improvement has been in construction. A total of 290,000 new housing units are anticipated this year — a rise of 31.2 per cent over 1976, the report said. Consumer prices continued upward, but at a slower pace during May, the report said.

Housing board asks for $99,000 more

Martinez — The Contra Costa County Housing Authority will seek an added $99,000 to house another 100 poor families in the county.

Robert Gray, executive director of the authority, told its board of commissioners last week that the Department of Housing and Urban Development notified this county it was eligible for more funds under the Section 8 program.

Under the nation-wide rent assistance program called Section 8, the authority issues certificates to would-be renters. The renters have to find the rentals. The authority determines if both renters and houses are eligible under the program. Then both the renter and the authority share in paying the rent.

Gray said the authority now has 825 families in this program. He said certificates are available to low-income renters.

Almost 2,500 families are now receiving rental assistance under authority programs said Gray. He said 1,040 families live in authority owned housing. He noted that there are 2,500 families on the waiting list for this type of housing.

"But that is down from a year ago where there were 3,000 families on the list," he said.

Besides the 825 families under the Section 8 program, there are 1,600 families under the old Section 23 program, which is being discontinued in June 1978.

Under Section 23, the authority would lease the home directly from the landlord and then turn around and lease the home to the tenant.

For more information on the rent assistance program's call 228-5330.

Merle Hall (right) chats with Contra Costa Board of Realtors breakfast meeting program chairman Fred Belcher prior to presenting a program on the evaluation of small income properties. Hall, president of Walnut Creek's Dynamic Agents, Inc., is a real estate columnist for The Times.

Fantastic market for income properties

Walnut Creek — Small income properties are currently enjoying a "fantastic market" and there are great opportunities in the market-place for the investor.

But there are also pitfalls to avoid and only with thorough investigation and professional practice can the investor reach his financial goals, according to Walnut Creek realtor Merle Hall.

Hall recently spoke on evaluation of small income properties at the Contra Costa Board of Realtors weekly breakfast meeting. Hall said he defines small income properties as property worth just less than a million.

Realtor Hall, president of Dynamic Agents, Inc., said he has jacked up his monetary definition of small income properties because the value of the single-family home has skyrocketed in the past two years.

The Contra Costa Times real estate columnist debunked many of the terms used and heard in the income property investment field. Gross multiplier, capitalization rate, cash on cash and total equity rate were called "nonsense" by Hall.

The realtor said. These are changing times and there are no rule of thumb in this industry." He said the key to success, depending upon the investor goals, is diligent investigation of the property and its tax benefits, budgetary and future sale possibilities.

Another factor in successful income property investment is government policy toward the property.

Hall said the investor should investigate to see how local, state and national laws would affect the financial operation of the property in regards to maintenance.

Hall also urged his audience to investigate what type of "profit" the investor wanted out of his property.

Hall recalled an investment where the people involved "lost $500,000." He explained the investors, had the opportunity to purchase a commercial building but instead purchased a much nicer looking fourplex.

"They wanted the pride of ownership," Hall said. He reported that if they had purchased the commercial building they could have made $50,000 on the investment.

Pride of ownership can be a goal, Hall told fellow realtors.

Flashy decor

Parquet patterned wallpaper on walls and ceiling with matching fabric used for draperies and window seat unify a space once broken up with an overabundance of architectural detail. Maple captain's chest and oak end table enhance richness of detail and provide just the right accent.

(Left photo) In the hands of the skillful design team of Lynn and Irwin Berman, an awkwardly placed fireplace is transformed into a cozy, inviting focal point of this small room. Matching draperies and wallpaper, a dramatic play of patterns, and subdued colors are used to bring all the architectural elements of the room together.

The oak side table and delicate cherry tea table are reproductions of popular antiques.

Helpful hints for those hard to decorate homes

In decorating a home or an apartment, some rooms are easier than others. Some rooms come with built-in problems. Others are perfect gems. Even bare, they suggest a cozy retreat, or are so perfectly proportioned that they are at once inviting and satisfying.

Problem rooms come in a variety of shapes and sizes. Some are small, dark, dull and claustrophobic. Others are long and narrow. Some have lots of windows and no wall space, or have walls that are broken up with a series of closet doors. Heating units and electrical outlets are awkwardly placed, or the ceiling is too low. And, so it goes. Sometimes the problems seem too much to handle. But with patience, imagination and a good sense of design there's no problem that cannot be overcome.

A perfect example is a room recently transformed from ugly duckling to swan by the husband and wife design team of Lynn and Irwin W. Berman. In spite of some good qualities, such as handsome hardwood wall paneling and a lovely fireplace with an attractive mantle, the room was cluttered with architectural detail and idiosyncrasies. All of these things would have been fine in a larger room but in this small space they were overpowering. To make things even more difficult, the fireplace was very awkwardly placed. It was almost in the corner of the room, next to a wall that was more window than wall. The windows on that wall plus a bank of three smaller windows on the adjoining wall tended to dominate the space, breaking it up into small squares.

The problem was how to create unity in a space where none existed. Without making any structural changes, the Bermans knew that they had to lower the windows and bring the fireplace into focus. And they accomplished this with an elegant mix of patterns, warm colors, and rich textures. Draperies with matching wallpaper on inserts in the wood paneling and on the ceiling give the room a harmony that was sadly lacking in the original design. Fabric blinds on the windows, in a contrasting pattern using the same colors, are left lowered to minimize the height of the window.

To create a feeling of greater space, the Bermans kept the furniture to a minimum. They selected a few beautiful oak and maple tables and small chests to provide rich accents of warmth and texture. "There's nothing like wood, whether it's an antique cherry end table, or a modern birch chest, to bring a room to life," states Mrs. Berman. In a larger room, the Bermans would have stripped the wall paneling down, but here they needed to pull the room together with matching windows and walls.

"The mold that frames the panels is perfect. And, of course, the hardwood paneling is smoother than plaster and it has lasted for a hundred years — and is good for another hundred," Mrs. Berman states.

Income up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department says the growth of personal income from the first quarter of 1976 to the first quarter of 1977 outpaced the rise in consumer prices by 4 1/4 per cent.

Personal income increased 9 1/2 per cent during the period, compared with an increase of 5 1/2 per cent in consumer prices, the department said Thursday.

All states and the District of Columbia reported an increase in personal income.

Six Western states plus Michigan and New Hampshire reported the largest rises in nonfarm personal income. Delaware and North Dakota had the smallest increases.

'Navigable waters' term hampers Cal Realtors

Newport Beach, Ca. — The head of organized real estate in California today said this housing-starved state faces yet another crisis in Washington, D.C. and urged Realtor support of recently proposed amendments to the federal Water Pollution Control Act calling for a re-definition of the term "navigable waters."

Speaking before some 300 Realtors attending an investment conference at the Newporter Inn here, Jerome Blank of Albany, president of the more than 100,000-member California Association of Realtors, urged support of Sen. Lloyd Bentson's (D-Tex.) amendment to current law which requires U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' approval for any new construction along navigable waters.

Court decision changed the interpretation of the term navigable waters to mean any body of water which would include lakes, rivers, streams and even farm ponds, Blank told the Realtor group. "By this interpretation, any body of water in this drought-parched state is now considered 'navigable' and the implications to any new construction are horrendous."

He used the example of a lot on the shore of a stream or lake requiring lengthy Army Corps. of Engineers permit — approval before any building could be done and urged support of Bentson's amendments to remove the use of restrictive federal land controls.

"I have written to Sen. Allan Cranston (D-Calif.)

and to Sen. S.I. Hayakawa (R-Calif.) asking their support of this important amendment," Blank continued. "I didn't realize the implications of this until we tried to build a sixplex along a creek that is almost dry and found that we had to get an Army Corps. of Engineers permit. Can you imagine the implications of such a law?"

He cited the case of a developer near San Mateo, California who has been fighting with the Army for more than four-years to get a permit to build on "wetlands" in a lagoon community which has added several thousands of dollars to his cost of construction.

"While our interests are primarily those of California," Blank added, "the problem is nationwide. It affects a rancher in Idaho or a lakefront builder in Minnesota with the same severity."

He noted that he had just received a telegram from his counterpart at the Texas Association of Realtors, Reese Henry, urging California Realtors to support the Bentson amendment.

"The measure has passed the House of Representatives and within a short time the Senate will vote on this important issue," Blank said. "I don't believe the Senate Public Works Committee has really come to grips with this problem since they have recommended that the permit authority be taken away from the Corps. of Engineers and given to the protection Agency."

Shapell builds bay home HQ

Shapell Industries of Northern California Inc. has announced it will build a 20,000 - square foot building adjacent to the Milpitas Town Center on Milpitas Boulevard off Calaveras Boulevard.

The building will headquarter Shapell's Northern California division which oversees construction of the firm's Bay Area home developments. Shapell Industries Inc. has built over 30,000 homes in California since 1935.

Groundbreaking took place July 15 at the site with Shapell's Jim Ghilmetti, vice-president division manager, Stan Cook, marketing and sales director and Len Fryer of the land acquisition - forward planning department attending the ceremonies. Also present were various local dignitaries.

Construction is scheduled to begin at the end of August and completion is scheduled for early spring 1978.

Before construction can begin a road and a bridge leading to the site will be constructed.

Shapell's headquarters will occupy the entire second floor of the two story building. Ground floor offices will be available for lease with offices custom designed to suit the needs of individual tenants.

Plans include extensive landscaping of the exterior and interior courtyard. All offices on both stories will overlook the courtyard through floor - to - ceiling windows.

The exterior will have redwood facing, expansive areas of glass and is designed with roof towe effects capped with cedar shakes to give the building texture. Ample off - the - street parking is also planned.

Between 50 and 60 persons will work in the new headquarter headquarters and will supervise the firm's developments in San Leandro, Hayward, Danville - an Ramon, Milpitas, Sunnyvale, San Jose, San Mateo, Hillsborough, Belmont and Fremont.

The firm is moving its headquarters from 1287 Lawrence Rd. in Sunnyvale due to the increased activity of the Northern California division.

The building's architect is William W. Hedley Jr. of Campbell.

Views of the midlands

Looking towards Lake Michigan

Abe Lincoln is still providing a prism to the heartland of America.

The Amtrak special by that moniker, that is. The "Abe Lincoln" rolls out of Chicago's Union Station in mid-afternoon en route across Illinois to St. Louis, "the gateway city."

In the course of the trip, such as this writer took, one views the rolling farm lands, small towns and residents that makeup this great state.

Kankakee, Springfield... the silver and blue zephyr speeds relentlessly onward, across Illinois towards the mighty Mississippi and reemerging St. Louis.

Behind us are "the hawk," windy Chicago, and the other downstate towns of Rantoul, Champaign and Urbana.

Champaign is the home of the University of Illinois, where the immortal "No. 77," the "Wheaton Ice-man," Red Grange, once roamed as an All American halfback. The attraction this summer was the annual National Collegiate Athletic Association track and field championships.

On to Chicago and Sears Tower, 1,450 feet and 103 floors, Comiskey Park, home of the White Sox, and ancient Wrigley Field.

Then to St. Louis and "the arch," Busch Stadium, the Cardinals, and the memoirs of Charles Lindbergh.

Then home, from the heartlands back to Pacific shore.

The other heroes of big blaze

A state of emergency often brings people from all walks of life together to fight a common cause.

For the moment, they forget their individual identities and form a united front to work effectively as a team.

During the three day holocaust that set the slopes of Mt. Diablo ablaze, over 600 people coalesced from all over the state to fight the fire.

Most of them were firemen. They came from various branches of the California Division of Forestry, the Consolidated Fire District, the Office of Emergency Services, the East County and Danville fire districts, and the National Division of Forestry.

A lot of them were reserves who were called in.

Over 200 of the firefighters however were prisoners from correctional institutions up and down the state who volunteered to battle the blaze.

These institutions are operated by the California Department of Corrections in cooperation with the state Division of Forestry.

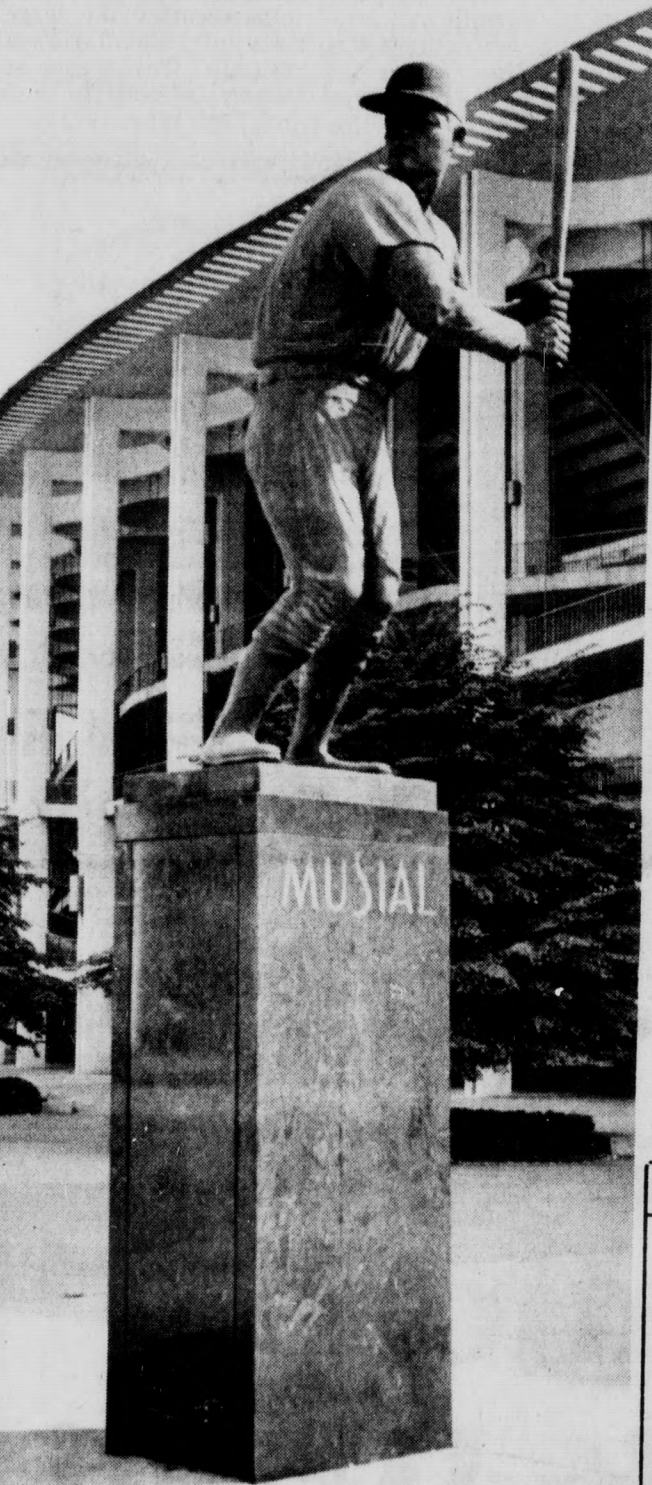

The adults included those from correctional camps in Tulare and San Luis Obispo counties.

Younger prisoners were from homes as far away as Santa Cruz, Mariposa and Sacramento counties which are under the jurisdiction of the California Youth Authority.

And there were other kinds of helpers too who didn't fight flames but performed services vital to the effort.

Fast-food outlets worry super marts

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Worried by the growth of fast-food restaurants, supermarkets are trying to keep customer dollars by offering more ready-to-eat products and telling people it costs less to eat at home.

"Obviously they (the restaurants) are a threat, the way more and more of them, spring up all the time," said Bill Foley, corporate meat coordinator for the Boston-headquartered First National supermarket chain.

"It's hard to put a finger on" Foley said, adding that the fast-food outlets have hit particularly hard at grocery store meat departments.

In response, First National has added new items to its delicatessen department and is urging customers to compare prices. A package of chopped meat, for example, carries a label saying: "Make your own quarter-pound hamburger for 27 cents."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says the rate of growth of the fast-food business slowed slightly during the recession, but is expected to continue steady through the 1980s. The department said a new analysis showed that 20 major fast-food chains plan to have 46,562 outlets in operation in the United States by 1980.

Norm Healy, national sales manager for Swift & Co., recently told an audience at the convention of the National Association of Retail Grocers: "In less than three years there will be 1.5 fast food restaurants for every supermarket in America and some 30,000 convenience stores offering fast-food takeout service. You can watch them grow and turn the threat into profits."

Healy urged the grocers to concentrate on delicatessen and bakery offerings which require little or no preparation at home. "Deli-bakery food service is an all-encompassing term," he said. "It describes a booming market valued at $4 to $5 billion annually. It is composed of the service deli, the service bakery, hot-to-go foods, catering, snack bars and cafeterias."

Some stores — particularly in the West — have added their own restaurants, but most supermarkets have avoided in-store snack bars. A survey by the Food Marketing Institute, which sponsored a special session on fast foods at the group's May convention in Dallas, showed that 10.8 percent of new stores opened last year included snack bars or in-store restaurants, about the same level as in 1972.

Fire ravages 70,000 acres

SAN FRANCISCO — A massive forest fire in Northern California roared closer to two smaller blazes Saturday, threatening to produce a holocaust of flames engulfing nearly 100,000 acres.

"We don't know when it's going to stop," said Brian Barrette of the California Department of Forestry.

The huge fire known as Scarface in Modoc County, which has blackened nearly 70,000 acres and swallowed two smaller fires, edged closer to the nearby 15,000-acre Pondosa and the 2,500-acre Indian Springs fires.

Firefighters predicted the three fires would merge later Saturday. Meanwhile, the Marble-Cone fire in virtually inaccessible terrain in Los Padres National Forest east of Big Sur on the Central California coast continued unchecked, with more than 57,000 acres ravaged.

Kathy Ross of the state forestry department said watershed loss was estimated at $113 million from the Marble-Cone fire alone. If by chance heavy rains should come to the drought-stricken area later this year, the burned-out land could trigger mudslides that would endanger seaside homes.

Strong winds blew off some of the fog that had hampered aircraft carrying fire retardants but it also fed fresh air to the fire, enabling it to burn even faster.

The 2,800 firefighters worked to contain the blaze inside a 51-mile fire line. Another 7,000 firefighters were battling the Marble-Cone fire and other blazes.

Both major fires were caused by a lightning storm that moved across the state earlier in the week, setting hundreds of other minor fires and forcing state officials to bring in thousands of firefighters from out of state to augment the California firefighting forces.

Persons who think they qualify for assistance should call the local Franchise Tax Board office, 800-852-7050, or contact the offices of state Sen. John Nejedly, 1855 Olympic Boulevard Walnut Creek, 94596, or Assemblyman John Knox, 367 Civic Drive, Pleasant Hill.

Senior citizens who have already filed claims should not refile as this could cause delays in receiving refunds, Whitney added.

Homeowners 62 and older who live in their home and have a household income of $12,000 or less may qualify for a partial property tax refund.
